BURIED IN DARKNESS 6 DAYS DIGS OUT

L. S. ASHLEY, GEOLOGIST OF NICK-A-JACK CAVE, SAVED

Was Trapped By Falling Earth As He Crawled Thru a Narrow Passage Way While Attempting to Search An Underground Cavern—Could Hear the Shallows Murmur In the River of Darkness Flowing Thru the Cavern.

Trapped six days in Nick-a-Jack Cave, Lawrence S. Ashley, geologist who entered the cave last Monday on an exploring trip, dug his way out Sunday.

Ashley said that he had been trapped by falling earth as he crawled thru a narrow passageway while attempting to search a large underground cavern believed connected with the cave.

Altho weak and dazed, Ashley said he had not suffered from his confinement.

He said he previously had cached food at a point near where he was caught, and had not suffered hunger.

A small shovel he carried was used in digging his way to the surface, he declared.

Ashley who had given more than two years to the exploration of the famed Nick-a-Jack cave, went in Monday with the determination to examine a new cavern he had discovered some time ago, leaving a message that if he did not return by Tuesday that the government be notified.

When he failed to return on schedule, his friends became alarmed and a searching party of natives familiar with the cave was organized and began the quest.

After three days of fruitless effort, appeal was made to Governor Austin Peay, who ordered Chief Mine Inspector O. H. Pile and a crew of trained mine rescuers to take charge of the search.

This crew, composed of men who had shown heroism in the rescue of entombed miners at Rockwood, Tennessee, on two occasions, made a trip into the cave Saturday but remained only a short time, having come to the conclusion that Ashley had met his death in the "River of Darkness" which flows within the cavern.

Preparations had been made to thoroughly drag the stream.

Harlan and D. J. Ashley, brothers of the explorer, hurried from Illinois and joined in the search and Roy F. Lewis, of Atlanta, who had explored the cave with Ashley, was summoned by wire to help direct the rescue crews. However, Ashley had dug himself out before Lewis arrived.

Entrance to Nick-a-Jack cave is on the Tennessee line, where that state is joined by Alabama and Georgia, and the cave extends south into the latter two states.

It was reported that Ashley had leased the cave for 50 years.

It has a large number of subcaverns, some of which have never been explored.

For a mile and a half from the entrance, the River of Darkness runs thru the cave, and visitors have frequently been taken by boat on this stream by Ashley and cave guides.

The river is said to be 15 feet deep in places and at others runs under walls of the cavern where the boat cannot go.

The cave, in early history, was the rendezvous of marauding bands of Cherokee Indians, who carried on forays against the white settlers.

Reports reached the Chattanooga, Tennessee Times Sunday, afternoon that a controversy was brewing at Shellmound between factions of that community and South Pittsburg, the latter claiming Ashley "faked" the cave incident for publicity purposes.

Information reaching The Times indicating that the trouble was not serious. There had been considerable feeling between the two communities previously over the routing of a high way thru the section and it was believed that the Ashley incident was an outgrowth of that.

Miners from the South Pittsburg section offered their aid in searching for Ashley and both communities had cooperated in the search.

It was rumored that a large crowd of South Pittsburg people held a demonstration at the cave Sunday, but had returned to their homes with out trouble.

DAUGHTERS OF UNION VETERANS WILL ORGANIZE.

There will be a meeting of Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil war was to organize a tent in Circleville at Memorial hall Tuesday evening, August 23 at 7 o'clock. All daughters, granddaughters or great-granddaughters are eligible.

TO BUILD DUTCH COLONIAL.

Harry W. Heffner has decided to build a Dutch Colonial brick house of seven rooms on the ground back of the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Heffner, who live on the corner of Court and Union streets. The house will face Union street.

NEWS ABOUT COURT HOUSE

General Happenings Taken From the Records of the Various County Offices

Prisoners Sentenced.

Lee Reynolds on a charge of forgery was sentenced to a period of five years in the penitentiary on one charge of forgery and the other charges were not pressed.

Earl Ivie, charged with burglarizing Friedman's store was sentenced to not less than three years in the Mansfield reformatory. Sentence was not passed on his wife, who told the court and prosecuting a pitiful tale. She is the mother of a girl now five years of age. She was married at the age of fourteen. Mr. Ivie is her second husband and she is now twenty-one. Her parents were sent for and her story will be investigated before sentence is passed.

Prisoners Released.

Albert Fowler and Charles Markel two indigent prisoners sentenced to pay fines of $100 and costs each August 11, on charges of possessing liquor and in default were remanded to the county jail were on recommendation of the sentencing judge and the sheriff released by the county county commissioners. The prisoners have families to support. They agreed to pay so much of their fine each week.

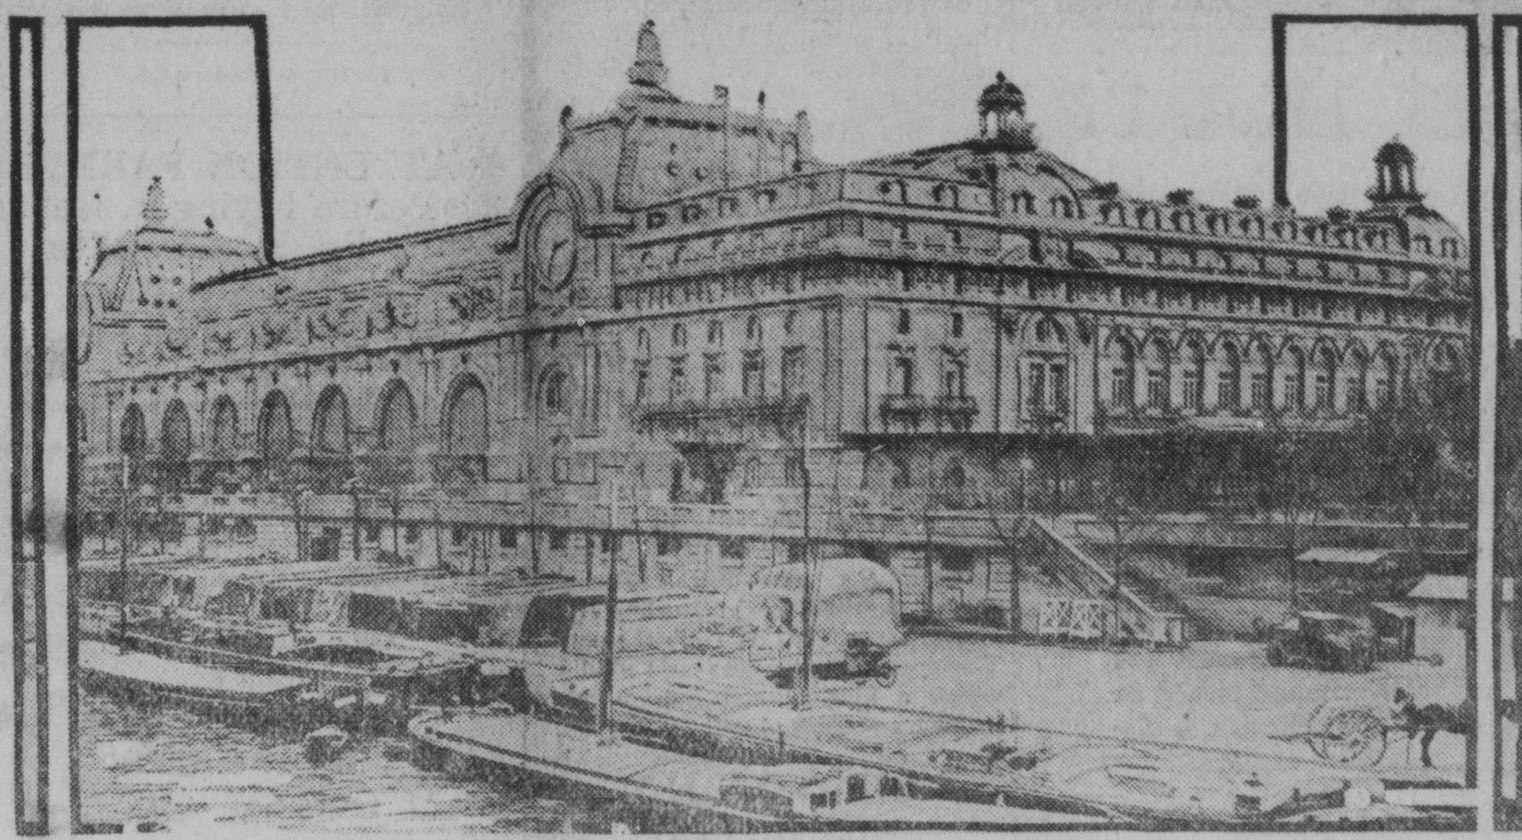

Fined On Two Charges.

Kenneth Ater, of Clarksburg, who had been arrested for possession and transporting whisky, appeared in the probate court before Judge Adkins and plead guilty to both charges, and he was fined $250 on each count. The five gallons of liquor were poured into the sewer in the presence of the prisoner, Sheriff Davis and Judge Adkins.

ATTENDING SHOOT.

W. I. Spangler, E. M. Stout, L. T. Shaner, J. C. Rader and Charles Miller left Monday for Vandalia, to attend the week's shoot of the Grand American handicap.

Headquarters of the Forty-and-Eight in Paris

Forty-and-Eight, the play and honor society of the American Legion, will have headquarters in the Palais d'Orsay while in Paris for the convention September 19 to 23. The Palais d'Orsay, shown above, on the Quay d'Orsay, was placed under construction in 1705 by a Paris magistrate, Boucher d'Orsay.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires By Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

Columbus —Major John Edwards, military scout in the Hocking Valley for Governor Vic Donahey, was released to enable him to direct his attention to duties in connection with the Spanish War Veterans bureau. Adjutant General Frank Henderson announced today.

Toledo—Unidentified man was hunted by police Monday in connection with the poisoning of Clifford Wagle, 12, who was in a serious condition at the county hospital from the effects of poison liquor. Pedestrians discovered the man lying in some weeds along a sidewalk.

Hamilton —When she fell from the running board of an auto during a collision near here yesterday, Stella Case, 16, was killed. The girl with seven girl friends on a hike was standing on the running board of a car driven by Edward Thomas, 22, of Elmwood when the auto crashed into one driven by Douglas Jacobs, of Hamilton.

Wilmington —When Elijah Converse, 70, attempted to leap from an auto when it was skidding on a gravel road, his head was caught in the door of the car and he was killed. Clint Cadwallader, driver was not hurt.

Mr. Vernon—Sheriff C. G. Stream and a posse of deputies were searching the hills and fields of Knox county today for Richard Cole, alias Joe Smith, 27, formerly of West Virginia and Cincinnati, who authorities say shot and killed Harry Swank, 17, of Ankneytown, of Knox county and wounded Richard Roberts 17, of Newark at Cole's home in Fredericktown, Sunday night.

Cincinnati — Another auto death was placed on records of Coroner F. C. Swing of Hamilton county, today. Miss Eunice Myers, 23, of North Bend, Ohio, died of injuries suffered Tuesday when an auto in which she was riding with Ralph Hahn was struck by a train at Harrison, Ohio. Total auto deaths in the county so far this year now are 78.

English Cathedral City

Rochester is a cathedral city of Kent, England, on the right bank of the Medway. It really forms one large town together with Chatham and Strood. Charles Dickens, who lived at Gad's Hill, three miles from Rochester, frequently introduces the city into his novels.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

The picture of Miss Mary Drum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Drum of this city, whose engagement to Elliott D. Howard, of Columbus, has been announced, appeared in both the Sunday Columbus Dispatch and Ohio State Journal.

AUTO COLLISION.

Sunday afternoon two automobiles, one headed east and the other headed west, both on Main street, took the chance of disregarding the signal of the traffic light. One took a right hand turn into North Court street, and the other made a left hand turn into the same street. They came together and one shoved the other up on the sidewalk in front of the First National bank. The fenders of both cars were damaged.

A CIRCLEVILLE WOMAN INJURED IN AUTO WRECK

Mrs. Sophia Goldsberry Was Severely Bruised Friday in Auto Collision.

Mrs. Sophia Goldsberry of Circleville, was seriously injured late Friday in an automobile collision near Tecumseh, according to the Associated Press and is now in a hospital at Ardian, Michigan, where her condition is regarded as critical. She was in the auto of her son, Carl Goldsberry of 1205 North Columbus street, Lancaster, assistant superintendent at the U. S. Gypsum plant here.

Mr. Goldsberry left Lancaster early Friday morning on a vacation trip taking his mother and his family with him for a ten day motor trip thru Michigan. Whether the Lancaster man, his wife and their three small children had been hurt could not be learned as there was no one at the Goldsberry home.—Lancaster Eagle.

Mrs. Goldsberry's home in this city is on Pinkney street. Later reports of her condition are that she was bruised about the body. She was taken to the home of her son at Chelsea, Michigan, instead of a hospital.

Material for Gas Bags

Silk, cotton and linen are the textiles extensively used in the manufacture of gas bags for balloons and airships, but all of these materials require the addition of a gas-holding treatment, such as varnish, India rubber, goldbeater's skin and so-called "dopes."

ANARCHISTS NEAR DEATH HOPES FADE

Sacco and Vanzetti Were Both Stoical When They Received News of Defeat.

Developments in the Sacco-Vanzetti case are:

1. Supreme Court Justice Louis D. Brandies declined to entertain a petition for a stay of execution on the ground that it would be unethical, since his family is interested in the case.

2. Arthur D. Hill, chief of the defense counsel, leaves for the Isle au Haut, on the coast of Maine, to present a similar petition to Justice Harlan F. Stone, of the supreme court.

3. Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti abandon hope and prepare to die in the electric chair Monday night.

4. Vanzetti visited by his sister and Sacco by his wife in death cell.

5. Girl in red raincoat carrying placard with words, "Sacci and Vanzetti shall not die" causes near riot on Boston Common and police disperse 5,000.

6. Senator William E. Borah invited to Boston after volunteering his services to the defense.

In the meantime defense counsel took steps to appeal to Chief Justice Taft for a stay of execution.

Sacco and Vanzetti were stoical when they received the news of their last defeat. They hadn't placed any hopes on its success anyway. They have been disappointed too often before. Hope faded from their breasts when the full bench of the late supreme court overruled all their motions last Friday.

They fully expect to die tonight. They share the general impression in that respect.

Nevertheless, their friends continue their frantic efforts to save them. A strong appeal is to be made to United States Senator David I. Walsh.

United States Attorney General John G. Sargent said he would take under advisement an appeal that was made to him.

But these are slim chances—slim indeed, and no one knows it any better than Sacco and Vanzetti.

WILLIAM KUHN'S BETTER.

Mrs. William Kuhns and daughter, Miss Veronica, who were visiting Mr. Kuhns for several days at Mt. Carmel hospital, Columbus, returned home Sunday evening. They report that he is somewhat better and hopes are entertained for his complete recovery.

TEACHERS AND PUPILS HOLD BIG REUNION

Old Pleasant Grove District Was Scene of Happy Meeting Sunday, August 21.

Former pupils and teachers of the Pleasant Grove district school, had a most delightful time on the old school grounds last Sunday. Tables were spread in the shade of the big trees and all enjoyed one of the sumptuous dinner for which the good housewives of Pleasant Grove have always been noted.

A large crowd assembled for the occasion, but it was possible to obtain only a partial list of those fortunate enough to be present.

Among those present were the following:

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Eymon and daughters, Misses Margery and Katherine, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Waggaman, of Marion; Mr. and Mrs. Pearl E. Vincent, of Alton, Illinois; Mr. and Mrs. James Colwell, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd B. Yates, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Yates and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Yates, Dayton; Mrs. Albert Ater and daughter, Elizabeth, Urbana, Illinois; Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Tarbill, Charles Voss, Mrs. Orland Hays and daughter, Washington C. H.; Mr. and Mrs. George M. Yates and daughter, Georgianna, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dunn and daughter, Miss Thelma, Mrs. Sarah Ater, Springfield; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bockard, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Otherwise He Was O. K.

At a dinner during the war a certain man of international fame was being discussed. Opinions differed concerning him. Some of the diners attacked him savagely, others insisted that he was a fine fellow despite his mistakes. J. M. CHADWELL IS A LIFE-SAVER

A. W. Chadwell, boiler room foreman of the Mead Pulp and Paper company's plant at Kingsport, Tenn., has set a record in heroism that his fellow-workers in this city will require a long time to equal.

Chadwell, who lives in Roanoke, Va., recently was returning home for a vacation, and while passing through Abington, Va., noticed a baby playing on the tracks of the Norfolk & Western railroad.

As he approached the tracks, he heard the frantic engineer of a freight train blowing his whistle and grinding his brakes in an effort to stop and avoid running over the child.

Chadwell, with rare forethought and courage, speeded up the car, opened the side door, and with one hand guided his auto over the crossing while with the other, he reached down and snatched the baby from the path of the fast approaching train.

He is being mentioned for a Carnegie Hero Medal, according to local paper mill officials who have been informed of the deed.—Chillicothe News-Advertiser.

Emergency
Jim

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

JIM went down to the station to see the two girls off—his sister Constance and her chum Madge—on their adventurous expedition to the big city, armed with two exquisitely engraved diplomas of the local business college and unlimited expectations.

Jim was gloomy and took no pains to conceal the fact. Dutifully he kissed his sister, then seized Madge's little gloved hand. "Remember," he said hoarsely, "when the fifth avenue high hats are chasing you, I'm still thinking about you back here holding down my little old job in Perkins' hardware store. If you want me in an emergency—well, I'll be waiting."

This was merely an attempt to convey to her as well as a man could in the presence of his sister that he was hers to the death.

And now they had been here six months, rooming together in a tiny apartment opening on an airshaft where air was air without anything particularly fresh about it and sunshine was to be had only by going out after it.

Through employment agencies, each had landed a small position and—a fact which seemed more important to each than the job—both had acquired an esquire of sorts.

This had come about through a former acquaintance of Constance's in the business college, one George Perkins who, hearing from the folks back home that Constance was in New York, had got her address through them and hunted her up.

The second time he came he brought with him a friend, a smartly dressed, personable boy who looked, Constance said afterward, just like his name which was Mortimer Pleyster. Madge was smitten at once and by the third meeting was convinced not only that she was in love with him but that, properly encouraged, he would return her sentiments.

But first there was that little matter of "proper encouragement," for as the days passed, the young man in question, although friendly and always willing to make a fourth at their good times, failed to hint at any desire for an engagement, much less a wedding.

Yet it was Mortimer himself who let fall the word which might have proved Madge's undoing.

"I sure miss good home cooking," he remarked one night. "These sandwiches are the berries."

The next time he came Madge had made not only more sandwiches but a chocolate cake, one of those luscious, three decker affairs with a generous topping of frosting. Mortimer sampled it freely while Madge watched him gleefully.

When he had gone, she made a brave proposal to Constance. "Let's invite the boys to Sunday dinner," she suggested eagerly. "I'm willing to do every bit of the cooking."

Constance was doubtful. "On a two burner gas plate?"

"On one, if necessary!" retorted Madge. "Plank steak and all the fixings!"

So it was settled and the two young men were duly invited over the telephone.

Now it is no small matter to get up a large-sized meal in a small-sized apartment out of a very slender food budget. In fact, it was only by considerable planning, scrimping and self-denial that the thing was managed at all and, by the time the Sunday selected for the affair had arrived, Madge was beginning to wonder if even winning the handsome Mortimer was worth the effort expended.

The meal, as a meal, was a tremendous success from start to finish. The steak was done to a turn and not a shade beyond; the vegetables were tender and decoratively fluted; the dessert, made earlier in the day, was coldly delicious. If Mortimer was less lively than usual, Madge was too concerned with her serving to notice.

Her moment was to come when, replete with the good things she had given him, Mortimer should expand and perhaps suggest that she cook for him the rest of his days. For Madge imagined that that was what she desired, above all else.

Came the moment. Constance, insisting that Madge had done her share of labor, was sociably doing the dishes in the kitchen with George. Madge and Mort had the tiny sitting-room to themselves.

"I've got something to tell you," said Mortimer suddenly.

"Yes?" encouraged Madge, her heart skipping a beat or two.

"I'm going back home to my father's office," he said. "All this"—he signified his surroundings with a wave of his hand—"and your dandy meals and all have made me—well, sort of hanker for a place of my own. There's a little girl upstate there I used to know that you remind me of. I'm going back to her and I wanted you to be the first to know."

Two days later, Jim Brenton entered Perkins' hardware store with an expansive grin on his face. In his pocket was a night letter from the girl he had loved since kindergarten days and it said the words he most wanted to hear.

Dear Jim:

"There was a man I thought I wanted to propose to but when he didn't I was glad after all and it must have been because I love you, only it took an emergency or something to show me, and do you still feel the same?" "MADGE."

INTERESTING

DECISION

Of Judge Clarence Curtain of Pickaway Common Pleas.

A decision of exceptional interest to business men and attorneys throughout the county was handed down by Judge Clarence Curtain of Pickaway Common Pleas Court in the case of Harry Brown vs. Charles Ankrom, et al.

The action was brought by Brown in the Justice of Peace court of Squire Geo. Strawser of Circleville township. An affidavit for attachment with summons was issued and property of defendants found at their home in Muhlenberg township was attached.

On motion of defendants to discharge the attachment for reason that Justices of the Peace have no jurisdiction outside of the township for which they are elected the case was taken to the Court of Common Pleas for decision on the motion.

Judge Curtain in a lengthy opinion decided that Justice Courts in this county have jurisdiction to issue summons with affidavits of attachment co-extensive within the boundaries of the county, and the motion of defendants was overruled.

Paul E. Adkins was attorney for plaintiff and C. A. Leist was attorney for defendants.

PICTURE OF SEA SERPENTMonster With Sheep's Head Often
Seen in Okanogan Lake, British Columbia.Okanogan, Wash.—With a standing offer of $500 for a snapshot of the strange creature noticed repeatedly in Okanogan lake, across the line in Canada, local residents and many adventurers are living along the shores
watching daily for the expected appearance of Ogopogo, as Indians have designated the monster.The sea serpent report emanating from the northern lake is not a fairy tale, for affidavits of well known people are on file at Vernon, B. C., to prove they observed Ogopogo, with its sheeplike head and long, serpentine body. From time to time there have been stories of a strange denizen of the lake, to which was attached a general incredulity. Some folks said nothing for fear of ridicule, but others
having seen it compared notes found
to possess common points.Of the numerous eyewitnesses of the deep water creature J. L. Logie, a resident along the lake for 20 years,
prepared a statement for a newspaper,
describing his observance of Ogopogo."On our way from Summerland, driving along the lake, we saw quite a ripple and a swell ahead of us, close to the shore, but the lake itself was perfectly calm. Driving about 25 miles an hour, we soon came abreast
of the swell, when instantly a strange looking animal appeared, exposing about three feet of its body. The head looked very much like that of a sheep, but different from a seal, having a pointed nose. The body was dark, but no fins were above the water."As it swam a foot high swell was developed, showing the animal possessed weight and power. Diving suddenly, it again came to the surface
30 yards farther out. Hearing our voices, it then disappeared."In no story or picture have I ever read or seen anything like this. I am of the opinion there are several in the lake. Apparently they are getting more bold and expose themselves while playing or fighting."Okanogan lake is 20 miles long and 7 miles wide, and is said to be very deep. There is room for large creatures to live without exposing themselves to man except on rare occasions.One photographer declares he will stay the entire summer, that he may be the first to record the inland sea
serpent.Fails in Test to Enter

Forest Hills, Queens, with a $10 gold piece and a small bagful of clothes, said her mother, Mrs. T. C. Hills, because she failed in her entrance examinations for Smith college. No word has been heard from her.Beatrice, eighteen years old, was graduated from Kew-Forest school
in June, and told all her friends
that she was going to Smith this fall.
There was considerable commotion in the family at the time, what with moving out of their home to Forest Hills
inn while the house was being redecorated. Beatrice did not have much time to study, and then her grandmother died. But she was confident that she had passed the entrance tests
and spread the news that she was going to Smith.Word came that she had failed, and Beatrice left home, wearing a black suit and hat, a few clothes in a small bag and the $10 gold piece, a graduation present, in her pocket.Hairdressing Takes All

WAS STARTED
BY PERSIANSPermanent Wavers Have Used Hair Curlers Since
the Beginning of Time.Ancient Persia started the permanent wave craze now sweeping over feminine America.Thousands of years before kid curlers were invented, when putting straight hair up in wet rags to make it kink was still unheard of, Persian princesses were leading their satraps
on with flirtatious nods of flawlessly
waved heads."Altho American beauticians have put the 'permanence' into permanent waving," said Miss Harriet M. Chamberlin, New York, of the Gabrieleen
Permanent Waving company, in an address before the American Cosmet-icians' Societys' annual convention on the new art of gabrieleening the hair,
"the methods in vogue now are based upon those practiced by the Persians centuries ago."Since the beginning of time, permanent wavers have used curlers around which to wind the hair. The Persians employed wooden sticks instead of the more approved glass or metal rollers which we use. Agencies to retain moisture while the baking or steaming processes are going on have been essentials thru
the ages.The Persians depended upon plain,
every day, garden variety clay,
smeared upon the sticks, to keep their customers' locks alive. American beauty operators place their faith in reconditioning oils and specially prepared sachets, one the metal bakers are slipped over the patrons'
curlers. All methods require heat.
The Persians let Old Sol do it while
we depend upon our electric light companies."When of old a woman's locks had been wound upon sticks and then encased in clay, the beautician guided her to a place in the sun to pause and pray for the hoped-for curls.But even there the hairdresser's duties did not end. She had to see that her patroness took periodic vacations
from the blistering rays beneath the shade of the nearest palm. And,
when at last the clay had baked into
hard mud, it became the specialist's duty to shampoo the client's curls,
rinse them in fragrant perfume,
then shape them with the fingers in-
to undulating waves, and finally oil
them into permanent position.You can obtain Ethyl Gas now.

Typhoid Germ Lives

Years, Science Learns

San Francisco. — Disease-causing bacteria have many devices to perpetuate their kind in an adverse world. Bacteriologists of the Hooper foundation for medical research, University of California, have shown that tetanus spores may resist the temperature of boiling water for 90 minutes, botulinus in vegetable juices for 5½ hours and those of a closely related but harmless species for 8½ hours. Other workers have proved that typhoid and other organisms may remain alive for years at refrigerator or lower temperatures.

This happy provision of nature—happy, that is, for the bacterium—constitutes a factor of great danger for man and animals which it is the function of scientific research to obviate, says Dr. George E. Coleman of the Hooper foundation. "The brilliant success," he states, "that has been attained already, in which the experimental use of mice and guinea pigs has played a large part, is constantly being proclaimed by statistical evidence of fewer food poisonings and typhoid fever outbreaks, as well as by increased protection from many of our other microscopic foes."

Genuine Refiners' Ethyl Gas can only be obtained from The Circleville Oil Co. Don't use a substitute. 20augd&wtf.

Ambassadors Defined

Ambassadors are ordinary when they reside permanently at a foreign court; or extraordinary when sent on a special occasion. They are generally ordinary in talent and extraordinary in expenses, ignorance and presumption.—Samuel Johnson.

Robin Answered the Ad

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

ROBIN STRAKER, known to all his many friends as Bin because he seemed always to have been everywhere, sat down for his breakfast of fragrant sausage and fried tomatoes which he had prepared himself. Bin liked getting his own breakfast.

Anyway Bin always spread down a fresh newspaper on his small table instead of a tea cloth—not necessarily to save laundry but simply because it was less trouble and always clean. He invariably opened it to a page where there were no pictures—usually the page on which the property advertisements arrayed themselves.

As a matter of fact, Bin had acquired this one habit while, during the war and far out in No Man's land, he might have had a moment during meal time to read the home papers and spread them out while consuming bully beef or other dainties of the soldier's life.

His breakfast now was a better affair altogether than those of war days, and while Bin enjoyed his sausage he idly scanned the columns of finely printed personals that happened to be just alongside his excellent cup of coffee.

"By Jove! That's funny," and Bin read again the personal that had called forth his ejaculation.

"Robin Straker: Information wanted. Please communicate. 003 John street. Frances."

Robin Straker knew, of course, that he was not the Straker mentioned in the advertisement, but he decided to look up the address at noon and see what was in the wind.

He finished his breakfast and dashed off to business. At noon he presented himself to the address given and sent in his card. The office was apparently that of a woman decorator as it breathed forth all sorts of alluring emblems of the feminine mind.

A young lady entered and Robin Straker caught his breath. He was instantly glad that he had the habit of spreading a newspaper down in place of a tea cloth—otherwise he might have missed one of the sweetest moments in life—that sudden, glorious moment when the One Girl arrives.

The young lady was, however, not struck in the same way. Her manner was icy.

"So you are Robin Straker, are you?" the fair one asked frigidly.

"I am," said Robin, "but not—"

"And why have you chosen to hide all these years—instead of facing things like a man. Frances has been searching for you for ten years—it's been a cowardly, hateful way to treat a girl—marry her and then desert her."

"I say—hold on," put in Straker finally getting a word in, "you're making a mistake. I'm not the Robin Straker you're so flattering to—"

"Then what are you here for?" she demanded.

"I say—you little spitfire—if you happened to see your own name in the paper and had some information that might help these seeking your namesake would you or would you not answer the appeal?"

"Well—if you're not the Robin Straker we're looking for why didn't you say so in the beginning?"

"I didn't get a look in," said Bin and grinned. "You had such a pile of flattering remarks to hurl at me that I couldn't get a word in edge-ways."

"I'm very sorry," she said, "and now that I've talked so much—you can start in."

"As a matter of fact," said Robin, "I saw the passing of the man you are looking for—he gasped out his real name to me just in the nick of time—with his last breath. There was a bit of a brawl—in Mexico—in 1920. I think it was, and he—Bob Straker—shot himself—he was—"

"But Bin thought better than to say just what the man was."

"You might just as well say it," said Polly. "He married my cousin, deserted her after a few months and never even had the decency to let her know whether he was dead or alive. She wants now to marry again and I was making an effort to ascertain for absolute certainty that she is free."

"I had never seen this Robin Straker and, naturally, didn't know—"

"You need not apologize any more," said Bin, "but don't you think considering you said such frightful things to me—the very moment I appeared in sight, that you'd better atone by making my lunch less lonely? Besides," he hastened to add as he saw a natural hesitation in Polly's desire to atone in just that way, "there is much I must tell you if your cousin is to be certain that she is free. Remember—no one but myself, perhaps was witness to the actual passing of the Robin Straker." He looked hard at Polly and added with a half grin, "You see I can almost bar this marriage of your cousin—if I'm not treated right."

Polly laughed, and Bin felt to wonder if she would sometimes laugh that way when they were having breakfast on a newspaper—and—how somehow felt that she would.

As a matter of fact, they had their first breakfast when they returned from their honeymoon on a spread out newspaper and there were fragrant sausages and fried tomatoes of Robin's cooking and Polly did laugh—for they were very happy.

AMUSEMENTS

More than forty acres of ground were occupied by the reproduction of a Canadian frontier village and fort used in filming of "The Flaming Forest" the Cosmopolitan production filmed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer under the direction of Reginald Barker, one of the most famous directors of western epics.

The picture, featuring Antonio Moreno and Renee Adoree, supported by a cast of more than twenty celebrated players, is now being shown at the Met theater.

The village, which was under construction for more than a month before a camera was cranked, was the largest motion picture set of its kind ever constructed and was a faithful reproduction of a frontier town and stockade of the early seventies before Canada ever made any real attempt to govern the three hundred thousand square miles known as the Northwest territory.

It was at first planned to film the entire production on the Canadian locales described in the famous book by James Oliver Curwood, but this was given up when it was learned that the original locales have been "marred" for picture purposes by the encroachment of civilization.

The set was then built in the mountains of California on a spot which in every way fitted Curwood's description. Following the filming of the village scenes the company of more than five hundred players were taken to Montana and to several additional locations in the California Sierras.

Among the supporting cast of players are Gardner James, borrowed from the Lasky studio; Oscar Beregi borrowed from Universal and Bert Roach and Tom O'Brien, two of M-G-M's featured players.

"Gob" of Uncertain Origin

The derivation of the word "gob," applied to sailors, is uncertain. Some authorities say that it comes from the Chinese; others, that the word was adopted from England. "Gob" in provincial English means a "coast guardman," probably from the fact that the seamen were accustomed to chew tobacco, since "gob" in English also means a "little lump or piece, or a mouthful."

The Fine Gold of It

There is an honor in business that is the fine gold of it; that reckons with every man justly; that loves right; that regards kindness, and fairness more highly than goods or prices or profits. It becomes a man more than his furnishings or his house. It speaks for him in the heart of everyone. His friendships are serene and secure.—Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

Pastures Need Aid in Summer

If Weeds and Bushes Are Allowed to Grow Grass Will Be Injured.

How the pasture is handled during the midsummer determines the amount and quality of the grazing to be obtained from it during the remainder of the year.

"There are two big things to look out for with the pastures in midsummer," says S. J. Kirby, pasture specialist at North Carolina State college. "If weeds and bushes are allowed to grow, the grass will be shaded and the sod injured. Uneven grazing will also reduce both the quality and quantity of the herbage. Some pastures get off to a poor start this spring because of the cool, dry weather. This provided a favorable environment for weeds, native grasses and sedges, but was hurtful to new plantings of tame grasses. Even old pastures were hurt."

Weeds Rob Pastures.

If these weeds are allowed to grow, they will rob the pasture plants of light, moisture and plant food, states Mr. Kirby. All pastures in which the weeds have made a start should be mowed.

Bushes should be cut also. Some shade is good for the live stock that uses a pasture, but the close, dense shading produced by low-growing bushes and shrubs will kill the grass and clover plants. Bushes are especially bad in pastures newly seeded on cutover or recently cleared land.

Uneven Grazing Harmful.

Mr. Kirby finds that uneven grazing is another of the detriments to good pastures. This results when not enough animals are placed on the grass to keep the sod grazed evenly. When only a few animals are in the pasture, they will graze heavily in some places and allow the other parts to grow unhindered. Those grasses and clovers growing tall and going to seed become hard, fibrous and unpalatable, whereas had they been properly grazed, would have been succulent, tender and palatable. If grazing is uneven, mow the parts not grazed or, better still, add a few more dairy cows to the farm, states Mr. Kirby.

Phosphate Will Balance

Manure Applied to Corn

Farmers who have manure to apply to their corn land will find it to their advantage to mix 25 pounds of 16 per cent acid phosphate with each ton of manure, according to M. F. Miller, of the Missouri College of Agriculture. Every farmer believes in farm manure. Many believe in it so strongly that they will not use other kinds of fertilizers. Barnyard manure will give better returns, however, when mixed with acid phosphate as shown by the results of experiments conducted at the college.

Manure is low in phosphate. Its main value as a fertilizer is in the fact that it contains a high percentage of nitrogen. When phosphate is mixed with it, it makes a better balanced fertilizer.

Another reason for adding phosphate to manure is that it prevents volatilization of the ammonia. Ammonia is valuable in building up soil fertility.

Better Silage Assured and Expenses Cut Down

Silage will keep just as well without tamping or tramping as with tamping and much better than with poor tamping, according to James W. Linn, extension dairyman at the Kansas State Agricultural college. Let the ensilage fall to the middle of the silo so no loose spots will be formed and the weight will settle the silage down. This practice has proved particularly adaptable to silo filling where two or three men take four or five days. If the silo is filled rapidly, refilling is necessary when tramping is dispensed with. The extension dairyman believes that this method of taking several days to fill a silo assures better silage and it cuts down the expense.

Agricultural Notes

Sorghum as a silage crop is hard to beat.

Soil conservation is of fundamental importance.

Planting legumes is about the only way a farmer can get something for nothing.

Pure-bred cattle, poultry and pigs should be the slogan of all interested in farming.

The man who farms with his head wastes no time shouting "hard times." He doesn't have any.

Sell the crippled, defective and poor-producing cows and give those that remain a little more feed.

Organization may improve the quality of farm products and make payments to the producer on a quality basis.

Look out for clover and alfalfa seed that is dyed red or green. Either it is not hardy in this climate or its hardness is not known.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES

Planked steak with Hawaiian pineapple border is the newest addition to the vogue for planked steaks. It is delightful when prepared in this way: Cut a sirloin steak, weighing about three pounds, one and one-half inches thick. Wipe with a damp cloth. Trim off surplus fat. Broil on each side until almost done. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Heat plank, grease slightly and place the steak on it. Arrange around the edge slices of canned Hawaiian pineapple which have been dipped in flour and fried until a delicate brown, baked tomatoes (stuffed with crushed pineapple) and a border of mashed potatoes put through a pastry bag. Place in a hot oven or under a low flame until potatoes brown slightly. Garnish and serve at once.

British Cabbies Stick

to Trade as Old Men

London.—Taxi drivers of New York are infants compared to their colleagues of London.

Cabbies fifty and sixty years old are the rule rather than the exception here. The other day there was a collision between a taxicab, in which the earl and countess of Wharnclyffe were riding, and an omnibus. Testimony showed that the cab-driver was seventy-two years old, and has been driving in London for fifty years. When the motorcar came in he was one of the first to adopt the new mode of transportation.

Car No. 3—15,000 miles 62.709 M. P. H.—less than 14,353 minutes

Sedan

Three Auburn 8-88 Stock Cars Ran Total of:

42,000 miles in less than 14,664 minutes

Daring and unprecedented. Far in excess of any test ever imposed on stock cars. Not done behind pad locks and timed by factory employees, but publicly, under American Automobile Association sanction and supervision.

We decided to go to extremes never before undertaken by any manufacturer in order to completely, conclusively, and overwhelmingly prove Auburn is a faster, more efficient and more durable stock car.

Through blinding fogs; through down pours of rain, under the hottest sun in years; 28 thousand times around the 1½ mile track on slippery boards; never have men and machines endured such abnormal strains!

Nine drivers, working relays days and night, could not over tax the endurance and speed of the Auburn cars. Old records completely smashed from 5 to 5,000 miles for fully equipped stock cars. New records at every revolution of the wheels from 5,000 to 15,000 miles. The speed was phenomenal . . . 34 new stock car records . . .

But What Of It?

We knew all along that Auburn cars are that fast. But, it is not Auburn's proven speed superiority that is most significant . . . frankly, that was easy and incidental. What IS important is the fine character of car necessary for all three cars to survive such speed.

How's This For Proof?

After one of the roadsters had run the unequalled distance of ten thousand gruelling miles, in less than 9,479 minutes at an average speed of over 63 miles per hour, it was taken off the track, thoroughly checked—necessary replacements made—tuned and greased.

Then, for 1,000 miles more, this same car spurred forward at over 72 miles per hour. That proves reserve power, speed and endurance unknown in motor cars until now.

Another Thriller

After 2,637 miles, the Sedan running at about

70 miles an hour speed, turned over on the wet track, during a rainstorm in the middle of the night, slid on its top with all four wheels in the air, for about 50 feet, righted itself and then crashed into the railing. Two doors and three fenders were torn off, radiator and windshield smashed. Seven hours were spent for photographs, radiator and other body repairs and the car went back on the track. It caught up with the other cars, and finished the 15,000 miles at over 62 miles per hour speed. That proves the strong construction, and endurance of Auburn cars, although because in the accident, it lost three fenders and two doors, its entire distance cannot be counted as an official A. A. A. record, but it was officially timed by the A. A. A.

Triple Proof

It would have been perfectly startling if one car had broken all these records, but three Auburn cars were in this test—and all three of them did honor to the name of Auburn.

GEOGRAPHICAL

Location and Area of the Philippine Islands.

In the course of my work as a salesman I met some American friends who are after the truth about the Philippine conditions and things Philippines. To these inquiries after the truth it is always my great privilege and great pleasure to explain things Philippines with an open mind and unbiased point of view. I am sometimes greatly surprised, however, when I meet some who frankly admit that they know nothing about my country except that the Philippines are inhabited with semi-barbaric or uncivilized people. For the benefit of those who know little or nothing about the Philippines I take this opportunity to inform them about my adored native land and people.

To begin with, I invite my American friends to take a trip with me with their map before them and let us locate where the Philippine Archipelago is situated. Some, I know, will look for the Philippines in the Caribbean Sea, but no, let us take the other direction and explore the vast waters of the Pacific Ocean.

When we get to the other side of the seemingly endless blue waters we come to a group of numerous islands, numbering altogether 3,141 islands. These islands are the Philippine Islands which the vast majority of the American people never heard of until the guns of the gallant Admiral Dewey sounded in Manila Bay in 1898.

Now we have come to the Philippine Islands and let us now explore the coasts and see what surrounds them. Let us follow the North Star as our guide and begin our exploration in the north. That island north of us is the Japanese Island of Formosa; those to the west of us are French Indo-China, the British colony of Honkong, and the southern provinces of China; those south of us are the Dutch and British island of Borneo and the Dutch island of Celebes; and to the east of us is the bottomless Pacific Ocean which separates us from where we started our voyage. Let us note in our map that the islands we have just explored lie from 5 degrees north latitude to 22 degrees north latitude, and therefore are entirely in the tropics.

Let us also note the authenticated survey of the 3,141 islands we have seen, beginning from the tiny islet which we saw inhabited only by strange birds, to Luzon island with its millions of human inhabitants. 2,775 of these islands that I pointed out to you, seven-eighths of all, contain less than one square mile each, 262 islands contain between one to ten square miles, 73 islands have from 10 to 100 square miles, 20 islands between 100 to 1,000 square miles, and the rest contain 10,000 square miles each. Luzon, in the north, the biggest of them all, has 46,969 square miles, Mindanas in the far south, the next biggest, has approximately 36,292 square miles. Altogether we have a total land area in the Philippines of 115,000 square miles. This is in excess of the combined areas of the states of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware.

The Philippines have a mildly tropical climate. The nights are cool and sunstrokes are unknown. The average temperature is 80 degrees F. The summer capital in the northern mountains of Luzon—Baguio City—is an exception. Spring season reigns throughout the year in this beautiful city where the government officials spend their time during the hot months. The average temperature is said to be between 60 and 70 degrees F.

This is, my fellow voyagers, our general knowledge of Philippines. In our next trip to these islands, if you are not tired or got seasick of our first voyage, I propose to bring you with me and visit the people. We shall try to learn of their history, so that our vague notions about them shall, I hope, be clarified. I shall endeavor to make you visit the back ground of their origin, their culture, and the slow but sure development of education in the Philippine Islands up to the present time.

ALL-MASH

Feeding For Fall and Winter Egg Production.

Poultry keepers who have used the all-mash method of feeding chicks and growing pullets may continue the method for laying pullets.

The method has proved satisfactory for fall and winter egg production at the Ohio Experiment Station and is being used by many successful poultrymen.

The only change in the all-mash for egg production, according to D. C. Kennard, Station poultryman, is to increase the meat scraps from 5 to 10 per cent and decrease the corn from 70 to 65 per cent. Coarse ground wheat may be used instead of middlings in the mash. And for best results, Mr. Kennard would also use milk in some form.

Success with all-mash feeding the laying pullets, especially for winter eggs, is largely determined by the kind of mixture and manner of feeding it. The mash should be as granular as possible rather than finely ground. A suitable type of feeder should provide 20 to 24 feet of eating space per hundred pullets. Fresh mash should be fed daily in the evening, the amount being about what will be consumed during the next twenty-four hours.

Electric lights may be used to advantage. A warm moist mash fed in the evening, especially in cold weather, may prove beneficial.

Details relative to the all-mash method of feeding layers may be had by writing the Ohio Experiment Station at Wooster.

BEWARE OF THE DEADLY DOTTED LINE

By W. R. MOREHOUSE
Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association

WITHDRAWING the family's savings account at the bank where it is safe, and losing it through speculation is a serious matter. It may bring great hardship, especially to the mistress of the home. It may force great economies in household management or amount to actual privation. It may mean that the children will have to go to work before they complete their education. The loss of the family's accumulations may even result in physical breakdown on the part of the wife through worry over the loss of savings which she helped to accumulate at the sacrifice of home comforts, but was not consulted when it came to investing them. The making of investments by men who are heads of families and inexperienced in finance should not be undertaken without consulting her. But even if both agree the venture should be talked over with the local banker or information about it obtained from the National Better Business Bureau in New York, which serves without cost and purely in the public interest. If this is done a lot of trouble and quite likely many regrets and heartaches will be avoided.

There is one point in the activities of the inexperienced investor where he should have above all a red-light stop signal to cause him to pause and investigate and that is just before he reaches the decision to "sign on the dotted line." Before you part with your savings in the bank by signing a contract placed before you by sharp promoters, stop, examine and investigate! It will pay to read the contract several times, even reading it aloud, all the while weighing every term. It will pay to be on guard against the deadly fine print usually incorporated in most contracts,—so small that it strains your eyes and causes you to skim over it superficially. Do not sign blindfolded. It will pay well to take plenty of time to study the contract by yourself where all is quiet and you are free from the personal influence of the persuasive promoter, for to sign without the calmest consideration may spell your Waterloo financially.

Unless dealing with a responsible firm or individual, never sign on the dotted line. If in the least doubt, don't sign. Never sign on verbal assurances that you are fully protected. Terms stated orally but not incorporated in a contract are not binding. Glowing promises, wild exaggerations and gross misstatements of facts are seldom reduced to writing or made in the presence of your witnesses. Your failure to read and to understand a contract before signing is not a legal excuse. When you sign a contract you proclaim that you agree with its terms and will abide by and endeavor to carry them out.

Don't sign just because some high-pressure salesman tells you that you are a wonder, or that you show good judgment, or that you have a lot of sense. Sign only when you are fully convinced that your interests are fully protected.

Prominent Men Used as Scenery
A number of slick promoters recently organized in a certain city an "automobile club" with the assurance

THE FARMER'S BEST WAY OUT

Dean Russell of Wisconsin College of Agriculture says: "Two things have hit the farmer hard but the same things have hit business. They are increase in cost of production and decline in prices which latter has been more drastic in farm products than manufactured products. The farmer's political friends say salvation can be found through legislation. Our legislative doctors propose price control. The difficulty with this is price control always means price elevation which always produces expansion in production and if this occurs without expansion in consumption you have inevitable decline in prices. The remedy works to produce the very opposite result from that intended.

"Another legislative panacea would make it easier to borrow, as if running into debt was the solution of the difficulty. There are farmers who wish it had not been quite so easy to borrow because the inevitable day comes when they have to pay principal and interest. The third legislative remedy would make easier the pathway for cooperative endeavor. All you have to do is to wave the magic wand 'Cooperation' and all the farmer's difficulties will immediately disappear. I wonder if there is any government that can make people cooperate. The success of cooperative effort will lie in organization from the bottom up rather than from the top down and it will take a decade or two for the results to be felt.

"The farmers have at hand a remedy that can be utilized immediately with the definite knowledge that it will secure far better results. If they will take a leaf out of present day business methods they will have relief in agriculture they will not have to wait for. Business has suffered

Governors was organized with the names of prominent local citizens, among them two eminent judges. No sooner was the organization of the board complete than the promoters, armed with the endorsement of these outstanding men, went forth to reap a great harvest by selling memberships. They got the members—but the building of the garages remained an idle dream.

When the members of the Board of Governors were later interviewed as to how they came to consent to the use of their names they stated that they thought the additional storage facilities were needed in the downtown district and they signed up without looking into the proposition carefully. Imagine their chagrin when told that a reading of the by-laws of the organization showed that the Board of Governors had no powers but had been used merely as scenery in order to sell memberships in a fake proposition!

Because these prominent citizens were careless with their names and failed to read and to investigate the enterprise, hundreds of business men bought memberships only to lose their money. Signing without reading is about the most dangerous act of financial carelessness that can be committed.

the same as the farmer, yet business came through in a way that is far ahead of the farmer. This has been brought about through industrial efficiency, through improvement of methods. They have increased labor output per unit to the degree the cost of production have actually been reduced by better methods of carrying on work. Industrial enterprises on a large scale are spending millions on research. In ten years automobile output per worker has increased 172 per cent, tires 211 per cent, oil 83 per cent, cement 61 per cent.

"Compare that with others. The packers have increased only 27 per cent, sugar refining 28 per cent, boots and shoes only 6 per cent. There has been an increase in agriculture since 1913 of 20 per cent. It is doubtful that business has any such opportunity as exists in agriculture to reduce cost of production through improved methods. Take corn,—Iowa shows a variation in cost of production from fifteen cents to seventy-five cents a bushel. In Illinois the cost of producing corn on 80 acre fields was reduced from fifty two cents to twenty cents a bushel. The manufacturer who had it within his power to reduce production costs from fifty-two to thirty cents per unit would be tickled to death with the opportunity of meeting competition under these conditions.

"The way out for the farmer is (1) to become a business man, (2) to adopt business methods, to adapt himself to the same kind of conditions and be as efficiently mobile as is our manufacturer or our business man in the ordinary channels of his trade, (3) to rely less upon political promises and more upon individual initiative, (4) to work toward cooperative endeavor but in the mean time not to wait for cooperative endeavor to solve all of these problems because individually he can do something at the present time."

FOLKSBURG ITEMS

We've just been over talking to Dr. Thinkle to see if there anybody sick that we ought to show sympathy by mentioning them in these items. But he says that everybody is going strong as far as he knows, and seems like even his dependable customers have found so many other things to occupy their minds here lately that their health has improved a good deal.

Simon Sloan drove down on Blue river last Friday thinking he might accept a job on a bridge they're building over there. But when he saw how heavy the work is, he only stayed long enough to pump up a tire and start back.

Sam Solomon's family put in a long hard day at a Street fair over in Albany last Thursday. They didn't get home until away in the night and that together with what they had consumed thru the day left them feeling mighty touchy the next morning. And they all tried to keep out of one another's sight as much as they could in order to stay peaceable.

Mrs. Ed Thomas, who was to preside at this week's meeting of the Woman's Discussion club, didn't get to attend on account of she had company. And she was disappointed some when she called a few of the members later to ask had they been able to hold the meeting, and they said it was the best session they'd had for a good while.

Miss Henrietta Nichols, who works in the law office of Attorney Parks, has been complaining that he had so much for her to do last week that it interrupted her a lot with the book she was reading.

Jason Crabb stopped Andy Dobbins yesterday afternoon to ask did he think a president ought to hold more than two terms of office. But Andy wouldn't say yes or no on account of he was in a hurry to get home to his supper and he didn't want to leave any unfinished argument.

Our neighboring town of Bromwell has been trying to make some witty remarks about us again, and the latest thing they've been saying is that the corn fields are crowding in on Folksburg and causing us to lose ground every year. But we can over look their comment, for even if they do have the county seat, they have to depend on us for something interesting to talk about.

Something knocked a fine flower pot off of Sidney Moon's porch yesterday and broke it. And Sidney has expressed such profound ignorance of what could have done it, that Mrs. Moon feels pretty certain it was him.

Mrs. Amanda Bell was telling some of the neighbors recently how her daughter Daisy's tastes have become more expensive all the time. She said used to Daisy was perfectly satisfied with a trip to Nashville or Albany once in a while, but now she has to go to the city for a week or two before she feels like she has been anywhere.

Somebody was talking the other day how hard it is to get a place on the bench in front of the Grand hotel any more. Seems like you can't even do it now by calling one of the occupants to a telephone and beating them back to the bench, for the reason that they've all become suspicious and won't answer a phone.

Joe Dadds and his wife drove over toward Polk county last Saturday to see if they could find some blackberries. Which they did, and they picked nearly four gallons in one place. They felt mighty good about it until the owner of the land came along and they had to give him all they had picked to settle for trespassing.

Adam Bird, our bachelor, tried to pass a Canadian quarter at the drug store yesterday. But he looked so guilty while he was trying to act natural and unconcerned, that they noticed the quarter and wouldn't take it.

L. S. ASHLEY, GEOLOGIST OF NICK-A-JACK CAVE, SAVED

Was Trapped By Falling Earth As He Crawled Thru a Narrow Passage Way While Attempting to Search An Underground Cavern—Could Hear the Shallows Murmur In the River of Darkness Flowing Thru the Cavern.

Trapped six days in Nick-a-Jack Cave, Lawrence S. Ashley, geologist who entered the cave last Monday on an exploring trip, dug his way out Sunday.

Ashley said that he had been trapped by falling earth as he crawled thru a narrow passageway while attempting to search a large underground cavern believed connected with the cave.

Altho weak and dazed, Ashley said he had not suffered from his confinement.

He said he previously had cached food at a point near where he was caught, and had not suffered hunger. A small shovel he carried was used in digging his way to the surface, he declared.

Ashley who had given more than two years to the exploration of the famed Nick-a-Jack cave, went in Monday with the determination to examine a new cavern he had discovered some time ago, leaving a message that if he did not return by Tuesday that the government be notified.

When he failed to return on schedule, his friends became alarmed and a searching party of natives familiar with the cave was organized and began the quest.

After three days of fruitless effort, appeal was made to Governor Austin Peay, who ordered Chief Mine Inspector O. H. Pile and a crew of trained mine rescuers to take charge of the search.

This crew, composed of men who had shown heroism in the rescue of entombed miners at Rockwood, Tennessee, on two occasions, made a trip into the cave Saturday but remained only a short time, having come to the conclusion that Ashley had met his death in the "River of Darkness" which flows within the cavern.

Preparations had been made to thoroughly drag the stream.

Harlan and D. J. Ashley, brothers of the explorer, hurried from Illinois and joined in the search and Roy F. Lewis, of Atlanta, who had explored the cave with Ashley, was summoned by wire to help direct the rescue crews. However, Ashley had dug himself out before Lewis arrived.

Entrance to Nick-a-Jack cave is on the Tennessee line, where that state is joined by Alabama and Georgia, and the cave extends south into the latter two states.

It was reported that Ashley had leased the cave for 50 years.

It has a large number of subcaverns, some of which have never been explored.

For a mile and a half from the entrance, the River of Darkness runs thru the cave, and visitors have frequently been taken by boat on this stream by Ashley and cave guides.

The river is said to be 15 feet deep in places and at others runs under walls of the cavern where the boat cannot go.

The cave, in early history, was the rendezvous of marauding bands of Cherokee Indians, who carried on forays against the white settlers.

Reports reached the Chattanooga, Tennessee Times Sunday, afternoon that a controversy was brewing at Shellmound between factions of that community and South Pittsburg, the latter claiming Ashley "faked" the cave incident for publicity purposes.

Information reaching The Times indicating that the trouble was not serious. There had been considerable feeling between the two communities previously over the routing of a high way thru the section and it was believed that the Ashley incident was an outgrowth of that.

Miners from the South Pittsburg section offered their aid in searching for Ashley and both communities had cooperated in the search.

It was rumored that a large crowd of South Pittsburg people held a demonstration at the cave Sunday, but had returned to their homes with out trouble.

NEWS ABOUT COURT HOUSE

General Happenings Taken From the Records of the Various County Offices

Prisoners Sentenced.

Lee Reynolds on a charge of forgery was sentenced to a period of five years in the penitentiary on one charge of forgery and the other charges were not pressed.

Earl Ivie, charged with burglarizing Friedman's store was sentenced to not less than three years in the Mansfield reformatory. Sentence was not passed on his wife, who told the court and prosecuting a pitiful tale. She is the mother of a girl now five years of age. She was married at the age of fourteen. Mr. Ivie is her second husband and she is now twenty-one. Her parents were sent for and her story will be investigated before sentence is passed.

Prisoners Released.

Albert Fowler and Charles Markel two indigent prisoners sentenced to pay fines of $100 and costs each August 11, on charges of possessing liquor and in default were remanded to the county jail were on recommendation of the sentencing judge and the sheriff released by the county commissioners. The prisoners have families to support. They agreed to pay so much of their fine each week.

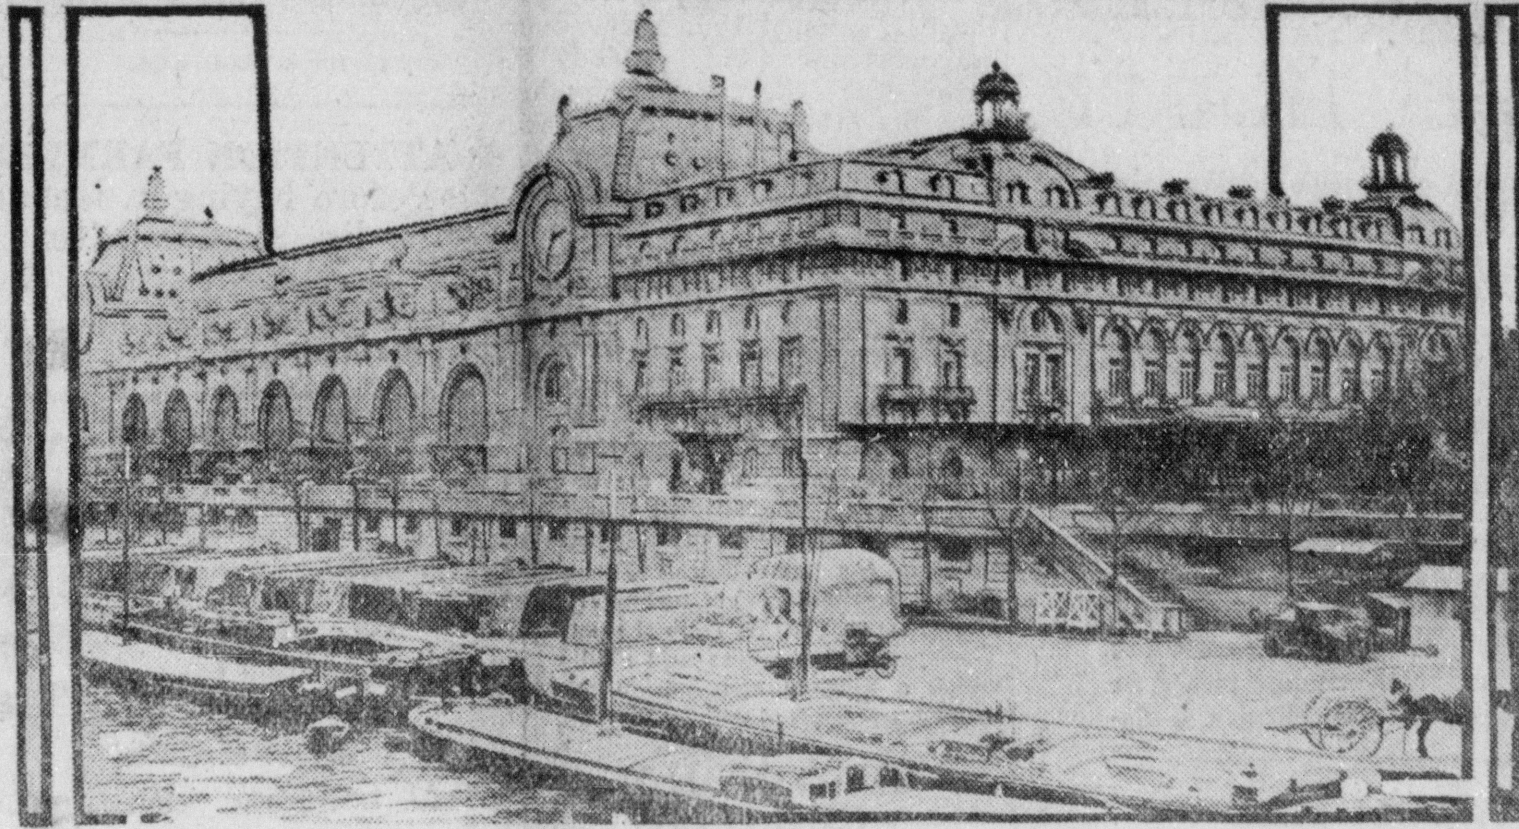

Fined On Two Charges.

Kenneth Ater, of Clarksburg, who had been arrested for possession and transporting whisky, appeared in the probate court before Judge Adkins and plead guilty to both charges, and he was fined $250 on each count. The five gallons of liquor were poured into the sewer in the presence of the prisoner, Sheriff Davis and Judge Adkins.

ATENDING SHOOT.

W. I. Spangler, E. M. Stout, L. T. Shaner, J. C. Rader and Charles Miller left Monday for Vandalia, to attend the week's shoot of the Grand American handicap.

Headquarters of the Forty-and-Eight in Paris

Forty-and-Eight, the play and honor society of the American Legion, will have headquarters in the Palais d'Orsay while in Paris for the convention September 19 to 23. The Palais d'Orsay, shown above, on the Quay d'Orsay, was placed under construction in 1708 by a Paris magistrate, Boucher d'Orsay.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires By Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

Columbus—Major John Edwards, military scout in the Hocking Valley for Governor Vic Donahey, was released to enable him to direct his attention to duties in connection with the Spanish War Veterans bureau, Adjutant General Frank Henderson announced today.

Toledo—Unidentified man was hunted by police Monday in connection with the poisoning of Clifford Wagle, 12, who was in a serious condition at the county hospital from the effects of poison liquor. Pedestrians discovered the man lying in some weeds along a sidewalk.

Hamilton—When she fell from the running board of an auto during a collision near here yesterday, Stella Case, 16, was killed. The girl with seven girl friends on a hike was standing on the running board of a car driven by Edward Thomas, 22, of Elmwood when the auto chashed into one driven by Douglas Jacobs, of Hamilton.

Wilmington—When Elijah Converse, 70, attempted to leap from an auto when it was skidding on a gravel road, his head was caught in the door of the car and he was killed. Clint Cadwallader, driver was not hurt.

Mr. Vernon—Sheriff C. G. Stream and a posse of deputies were searching the hills and fields of Knox county today for Richard Cole, alias Joe Smith, 27, formerly of West Virginia and Cincinnati, who authorities say shot and killed Harry Swank, 17, of Ankneytown, of Knox county and wounded Richard Roberts 17, of Newark at Cole's home in Fredericktown, Sunday night.

Cincinnati—Another auto death was placed on records of Coroner F. C. Swing of Hamilton county, today. Miss Eunice Myers, 23, of North Bend, Ohio, died of injuries suffered Tuesday when an auto in which she was riding with Ralph Hahn was struck by a train at Harrison, Ohio. Total auto deaths in the county so far this year now are 78.

English Cathedral City

Rochester is a cathedral city of Kent, England, on the right bank of the Medway. It really forms one large town together with Chatham and Strood. Charles Dickens, who lived at Gad's Hill, three miles from Rochester, frequently introduces the city into his novels.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

The picture of Miss Mary Drum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Drum of this city, whose engagement to Elliott D. Howard, of Columbus, has been announced, appeared in both the Sunday Columbus Dispatch and Ohio State Journal.

AUTO COLLISION.

Sunday afternoon two automobiles, one headed east and the other headed west, both on Main street, took the chance of disregarding the signal of the traffic light. One took a right hand turn into North Court street, and the other made a left hand turn into the same street. They came together and one shoved the other up on the sidewalk in front of the First National bank. The fenders of both cars were damaged.

A CIRCLEVILLE WOMAN INJURED IN AUTO WRECK

Mrs. Sophia Goldsberry Was Severely Bruised Friday in Auto Collision.

Mrs. Sophia Goldsberry of Circleville, was seriously injured late Friday in an automobile collision near Tecumseh, according to the Associated Press and is now in a hospital at Ardian, Michigan, where her condition is regarded as critical. She was in the auto of her son, Carl Goldsberry of 1205 North Columbus street, Lancaster, assistant superintendent at the U. S. Gypsum plant here.

Mr. Goldsberry left Lancaster early Friday morning on a vacation trip taking his mother and his family with him for a ten day motor trip thru Michigan. Whether the Lancaster man, his wife and their three small children had been hurt could not be learned as there was no one at the Goldsberry home.—Lancaster Eagle.

Mrs. Goldsberry's home in this city is on Pinkney street. Later reports of her condition are that she was bruised about the body. She was taken to the home of her son at Chelsea, Michigan, instead of a hospital.

Material for Gas Bags

Silk, cotton and linen are the textiles extensively used in the manufacture of gas bags for balloons and airships, but all of these materials require the addition of a gas-holding treatment, such as varnish, India rubber, goldbeater's skin and so-called "dopes."

ANARCHISTS NEAR DEATH HOPES FADE

Sacco and Vanzetti Were Both Stoical When They Received News of Defeat.

Developments in the Sacco-Vanzetti case are:

1. Supreme Court Justice Louis D. Brandies declined to entertain a petition for a stay of execution on the ground that it would be unethical, since his family is interested in the case.

2. Arthur D. Hill, chief of the defense counsel, leaves for the Isle au Haut, on the coast of Maine, to present a similar petition to Justice Harlan F. Stone, of the supreme court.

3. Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti abandon hope and prepare to die in the electric chair Monday night.

4. Vanzetti visited by his sister and Sacco by his wife in death cell.

5. Girl in red raincoat carrying placard with words, "Sacci and Vanzetti shall not die" causes near riot on Boston Common and police disperse 5,000.

6. Senator William E. Borah invited to Boston after volunteering his services to the defense.

In the meantime defense counsel took steps to appeal to Chief Justice Taft for a stay of execution.

Sacco and Vanzetti were stoical when they received the news of their last defeat. They hadn't placed any hopes on its success anyway. They have been disappointed too often before. Hope faded from their breasts when the full bench of the late supreme court overruled all their motions last Friday.

They fully expect to die tonight. They share the general impression in that respect.

Nevertheless, their friends continue their frantic efforts to save them. A strong appeal is to be made to United States Senator David I. Walsh.

United States Attorney General John G. Sargent said he would take under advisement an appeal that was made to him.

But these are slim chances—slim indeed, and no one knows it any better than Sacco and Vanzetti.

WILLIAM KUHN'S BETTER.

Mrs. William Kuhns and daughter, Miss Veronica, who were visiting Mr. Kuhns for several days at Mt. Carmel hospital, Columbus, returned home Sunday evening. They report that he is somewhat better and hopes are entertained for his complete recovery.

TEACHERS AND PUPILS HOLD BIG REUNION

Old Pleasant Grove District Was Scene of Happy Meeting Sunday, August 21.

Former pupils and teachers of the Pleasant Grove district school, had a most delightful time on the old school grounds last Sunday. Tables were spread in the shade of the big trees and all enjoyed one of the sumptuous dinner for which the good housewives of Pleasant Grove have always been noted.

A large crowd assembled for the occasion, but it was possible to obtain only a partial list of those fortunate enough to be present.

Among those present were the following:

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Eymon and daughters, Misses Margery and Katherine, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Waggaman, of Marion; Mr. and Mrs. Pearl E. Vincent, of Alton, Illinois; Mr. and Mrs. James Colwell, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd B. Yates, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Yates and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Yates, Dayton; Mrs. Albert Ater and daughter, Elizabeth, Urbana, Illinois; Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Tarbill, Charles Voss, Mrs. Orland Hays and daughter, Washington C. H.; Mr. and Mrs. George M. Yates and daughter, Georgianna, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dunn and daughter, Miss Thelma, Mrs. Sarah Ater, Springfield; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bockard, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Skinner, Roy Godden, Retta Godden, Margaret Stitt, Mr. and Mrs. Cary Jones, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Voss, Mary Louise Bockard, Gwendolyn Merl Bockard, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dawson, Urban J. Yates, Barton Lukens, Mr. and Mrs. Fred N. Fissell, I. I. Dowden, Freda Dowden, Lucile Dowden, Lawrence Dowden, C. C. Chappelear, Circleville.

So much pleasure was the portion of all that it was decided to make it an annual affair and the following organization was effected: President, Mrs. Maude Ater Babb; secretary, Claude Ater; assistant secretary, Miss Bernice Noble, all of the vicinity and treasurer, Mrs. Florence Yates Tarbill, of Washington C. H.

Mr. and Mrs. Simon Frank were Sunday visitors in Columbus.

Otherwise He Was O. K.

At a dinner during the war a certain man of international fame was being discussed. Opinions differed concerning him. Some of the diners attacked him savagely, others insisted that he was a fine fellow despite his mistakes. J. M. CHADWELL IS A LIFE-SAVER

A. W. Chadwell, boiler room foreman of the Mead Pulp and Paper company's plant at Kingsport, Tenn., has set a record in heroism that his fellow-workers in this city will require a long time to equal.

Chadwell, who lives in Roanoke, Va., recently was returning home for a vacation, and while passing through Abington, Va., noticed a baby playing on the tracks of the Norfolk & Western railroad.

As he approached the tracks, he heard the frantic engineer of a freight train blowing his whistle and grinding his brakes in an effort to stop and avoid running over the child.

Chadwell, with rare forethought and courage, speeded up the car, opened the side door, and with one hand guided his auto over the crossing while with the other, he reached down and snatched the baby from the path of the fast approaching train.

He is being mentioned for a Carnegie Hero Medal, according to local paper mill officials who have been informed of the deed. —Chillicothe News-Advertiser.

PICTURE OF SEA SERPENTMonster With Sheep's Head Often
Seen in Okanogan Lake, British Columbia.Okanogan, Wash.—With a standing
offer of $500 for a snapshot of the strange creature noticed repeatedly in Okanogan lake, across the line in Canada, local residents and many adventurers are living along the shores
watching daily for the expected appearance of Ogopogo, as Indians have designated the monster.The sea serpent report emanating from the northern lake is not a fairy
tale, for affidavits of well known people are on file at Vernon, B. C., to prove they observed Ogopogo, with its
sheeplike head and long, serpentine
body. From time to time there have been stories of a strange denizen of
the lake, to which was attached a general incredulity. Some folks said
nothing for fear of ridicule, but others
having seen it compared notes found
to possess common points.Of the numerous eyewitnesses of the deep water creature J. L. Logie, a resident along the lake for 20 years,
prepared a statement for a newspaper,
describing his observance of Ogopogo.
"On our way from Summerland,
driving along the lake, we saw quite a ripple and a swell ahead of us, close to the shore, but the lake itself was perfectly calm. Driving about 25
miles an hour, we soon came abreast
of the swell, when instantly a strange
looking animal appeared, exposing about three feet of its body. The head looked very much like that of a sheep, but different from a seal, having a pointed nose. The body was dark, but no fins were above the water."As it swam a foot high swell was developed, showing the animal possessed weight and power. Diving suddenly, it again came to the surface
30 yards farther out. Hearing our voices, it then disappeared."In no story or picture have I ever read or seen anything like this. I am
of the opinion there are several in the lake. Apparently they are getting more bold and expose themselves while playing or fighting."Okanogan lake is 20 miles long and 7 miles wide, and is said to be very deep. There is room for large creatures to live without exposing themselves to man except on rare occasions.One photographer declares he will stay the entire summer, that he may be the first to record the inland sea
serpent.Fails in Test to Enter College, Runs AwayNew York.—Beatrice Scott ran away from her home at Forest Hills inn,
Forest Hills, Queens, with a $10 gold
piece and a small bagful of clothes,
said her mother, Mrs. T. C. Hills, because she failed in her entrance examinations for Smith college. No word has been heard from her.Beatrice, eighteen years old, was graduated from Kew-Forest school
in June, and told all her friends
that she was going to Smith this fall.
There was considerable commotion in
the family at the time, what with moving out of their home to Forest Hills
inn while the house was being redecorated. Beatrice did not have much time to study, and then her grandmother died. But she was confident that she had passed the entrance tests
and spread the news that she was going to Smith.Word came that she had failed, and Beatrice left home, wearing a black
suit and hat, a few clothes in a small
bag and the $10 gold piece, a graduation present, in her pocket.Hairdressing Takes All

WAS STARTED
BY PERSIANSPermanent Wavers Have Used Hair Curlers Since
the Beginning of Time.Ancient Persia started the permanent wave craze now sweeping over
feminine America.Thousands of years before kid
curlers were invented, when putting straight hair up in wet rags to make it kinky was still unheard of, Persian princesses were leading their satraps
on with flirtatious nods of flawlessly
waved heads."Altho American beauticians have put the 'permanence' into permanent
waving," said Miss Harriet M. Cham-
berlin, New York, of the Gabrieleen
Permanent Waving company, in an address before the American Cosmet-icians' Societys' annual convention on the new art of gabrieleening the hair,
"the methods in vogue now are based upon those practiced by the Persians centuries ago."Since the beginning of time, permanent wavers have used curlers around which to wind the hair. The Persians employed wooden sticks instead of the more approved glass or
metal rollers which we use. Agencies to retain moisture while the baking or steaming processes are going on have been essentials thru
the ages.The Persians depended upon plain,
every day, garden variety clay,
smeared upon the sticks, to keep their customers' locks alive. American beauty operators place their faith in reconditioning oils and specially prepared sachets, one the metal
bakers are slipped over the patrons'
curlers. All methods require heat.
The Persians let Old Sol do it while
we depend upon our electric light
companies."When of old a woman's locks had been wound upon sticks and then encased in clay, the beautician guided
her to a place in the sun to pause
and pray for the hoped-for curls.But even there the hairdresser's duties did not end. She had to see that
her patroness took periodic vacations
from the blistering rays beneath the shade of the nearest palm. And,
when at last the clay had baked into
hard mud, it became the specialist's
duty to shampoo the client's curls,
rinse them in fragrant perfume,
then shape them with the fingers in-
to undulating waves, and finally oil
them into permanent position.You can obtain Ethyl Gas now.

Typhoid Germ Lives

Years, Science Learns

San Francisco. — Disease-causing bacteria have many devices to perpetuate their kind in an adverse world. Bacteriologists of the Hooper foundation for medical research, University of California, have shown that tetanus spores may resist the temperature of boiling water for 90 minutes, botulinus in vegetable juices for 5½ hours and those of a closely related but harmless species for 8½ hours. Other workers have proved that typhoid and other organisms may remain alive for years at refrigerator or lower temperatures.

This happy provision of nature—happy, that is, for the bacteria—constitutes a factor of great danger for man and animals which it is the function of scientific research to obviate, says Dr. George E. Coleman of the Hooper foundation. "The brilliant success," he states, "that has been attained already, in which the experimental use of mice and guinea pigs has played a large part, is constantly being proclaimed by statistical evidence of fewer food poisonings and typhoid fever outbreaks, as well as by increased protection from many of our other microscopic foes."

Genuine Refiners' Ethyl Gas can only be obtained from The Circleville Oil Co. Don't use a substitute. 20augd&wtf.

Ambassadors Defined

Ambassadors are ordinary when they reside permanently at a foreign court; or extraordinary when sent on a special occasion. They are generally ordinary in talent and extraordinary in expenses, ignorance and presumption.—Samuel Johnson.

Robin Answered the Ad

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

ROBIN STRAKER, known to all his many friends as Bin because he seemed always to have been everywhere, sat down for his breakfast of fragrant sausage and fried tomatoes which he had prepared himself. Bin liked getting his own breakfast.

Anyway Bin always spread down a fresh newspaper on his small table instead of a tea cloth—not necessarily to save laundry but simply because it was less trouble and always clean. He invariably opened it to a page where there were no pictures—usually the page on which the property advertisements arrayed themselves.

As a matter of fact, Bin had acquired this one habit while, during the war and far out in No Man's land, he might have had a moment during meal time to read the home papers and spread them out while consuming bully beef or other dainties of the soldier's life.

His breakfast now was a better affair altogether than those of war days, and while Bin enjoyed his sausage he idly scanned the columns of finely printed personals that happened to be just alongside his excellent cup of coffee.

"By Jove! That's funny," and Bin read again the personal that had called forth his ejaculation.

"Robin Straker: Information wanted. Please communicate. 093 John street. Frances."

Robin Straker knew, of course, that he was not the Straker mentioned in the advertisement, but he decided to look up the address at noon and see what was in the wind.

He finished his breakfast and dashed off to business. At noon he presented himself to the address given and sent in his card. The office was apparently that of a woman decorator as it breathed forth all sorts of alluring emblems of the feminine mind.

A young lady entered and Robin Straker caught his breath. He was instantly glad that he had the habit of spreading a newspaper down in place of a tea cloth—otherwise he might have missed one of the sweetest moments in life—that sudden, glorious moment when the One Girl arrives.

The young lady was, however, not struck in the same way. Her manner was icy.

"So you are Robin Straker, are you?" the fair one asked frigidly.

"I am," said Robin, "but not—"

"And why have you chosen to hide all these years—instead of facing things like a man, Frances has been searching for you for ten years—it's been a cowardly, hateful way to treat a girl—marry her and then desert her."

"I say—hold on," put in Straker finally getting a word in, "you're making a mistake. I'm not the Robin Straker you're so flattering to—"

"Then what are you here for?" she demanded.

"I say—you little spitfire—if you happened to see your own name in the paper and had some information that might help these seeking your namesake would you or would you not answer the appeal?"

"Well—if you're not the Robin Straker we're looking for why didn't you say so in the beginning?"

"I didn't get a look in," said Bin and grinned. "You had such a pile of flattering remarks to hurl at me that I couldn't get a word in edge ways."

"I'm very sorry," she said, "and now that I've talked so much—you can start in."

"As a matter of fact," said Robin, "I saw the passing of the man you are looking for—he gasped out his real name to me just in the nick of time—with his last breath. There was a bit of a brawl—in Mexico—in 1920. I think it was, and he—Bob Straker—shot himself—he was—" but Bin thought better than to say just what the man was.

"You might just as well say it," said Polly. "He married my cousin, deserted her after a few months and never even had the decency to let her know whether he was dead or alive. She wants now to marry again and I was making an effort to ascertain for absolute certainty that she is free. I had never seen this Robin Straker and, naturally, didn't know—"

"You need not apologize any more," said Bin, "but don't you think considering you said such frightful things to me—the very moment I appeared in sight, that you'd better atone by making my lunch hour less lonely? Besides," he hastened to add as he saw a natural hesitation in Polly's desire to atone in just that way, "there is such I must tell you if your cousin is to be certain that she is free. Remember—no one but myself, perhaps was witness to the actual passing of the Robin Straker." He looked hard at Polly and added with a half grin: "You see I can almost bar this marriage of your cousin—if I'm not treated right."

Polly laughed, and Bin fell to wondering if she would sometimes laugh that way when they were having breakfast on a newspaper—and—how somehow felt that she would.

As a matter of fact, they had their first breakfast when they returned from their honeymoon on a spread out newspaper and there were fragrant sausages and fried tomatoes of Robin's cooking and Polly did laugh—for they were very happy.

AMUSEMENTS

More than forty acres of ground were occupied by the reproduction of a Canadian frontier village and fort used in filming of "The Flaming Forest" the Cosmopolitan production filmed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer under the direction of Reginald Barker, one of the most famous directors of western epics.

The picture, featuring Antonio Moreno and Renee Adoree, supported by a cast of more than twenty celebrated players, is now being shown at the Met theater.

The village, which was under construction for more than a month before a camera was cranked, was the largest motion picture set of its kind ever constructed and was a faithful reproduction of a frontier town and stockade of the early seventies before Canada ever made any real attempt to govern the three hundred thousand square miles known as the Northwest territory.

It was at first planned to film the entire production on the Canadian locales described in the famous book by James Oliver Curwood, but this was given up when it was learned that the original locales have been "marred" for picture purposes by the encroachment of civilization.

The set was then built in the mountains of California on a spot which in every way fitted Curwood's description. Following the filming of the village scenes the company of more than five hundred players were taken to Montana and to several additional locations in the California Sierras.

Among the supporting cast of players are Gardner James, borrowed from the Lasky studio; Oscar Beregi borrowed from Universal and Bert Roach and Tom O'Brien, two of M-G-M's featured players.

"Gob" of Uncertain Origin

The derivation of the word "gob," applied to sailors, is uncertain. Some authorities say that it comes from the Chinese; others, that the word was adopted from England. "Gob" in provincial English means a "coast guardsman," probably from the fact that the seamen were accustomed to chew tobacco, since "gob" in English also means a "little lump or piece, or a mouthful."

The Fine Gold of It

There is an honor in business that is the fine gold of it; that reckons with every man justly; that loves right; that regards kindness, and fairness more highly than goods or prices or profits. It becomes a man more than his furnishings or his house. It speaks for him in the heart of everyone. His friendships are serene and secure.—Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

if at the end of that time, you find that the Stearns & Foster Mattress doesn't suit, you may return it to us with no expense to you whatever. Such is the manufacturer's guarantee.

By the use of an exclusive "webbing process" the tiny cotton fibres are woven and interwoven into thin, gauzy sheets, 360 of which are required to make the nine layers of springy, buoyant filler.

Come in today and let us show you this mattress INSIDE and OUTSIDE. You will see why they are the most comfortable and durable mattresses made.

STEVENSON'S

Pastures Need Aid in Summer

If Weeds and Bushes Are Allowed to Grow Grass Will Be Injured.

How the pasture is handled during the midsummer determines the amount and quality of the grazing to be obtained from it during the remainder of the year.

"There are two big things to look out for with the pastures in midsummer," says S. J. Kirby, pasture specialist at North Carolina State college. "If weeds and bushes are allowed to grow, the grass will be shaded and the sod injured. Uneven grazing will also reduce both the quality and quantity of the herbage. Some pastures got off to a poor start this spring because of the cool, dry weather. This provided a favorable environment for weeds, native grasses and sedges, but was hurtful to new plantings of tame grasses. Even old pastures were hurt."

Weeds Rob Pastures.

If these weeds are allowed to grow, they will rob the pasture plants of light, moisture and plant food, states Mr. Kirby. All pastures in which the weeds have made a start should be mowed.

Bushes should be cut also. Some shade is good for the live stock that uses a pasture, but the close, dense shading produced by low-growing bushes and shrubs will kill the grass and clover plants. Bushes are especially bad in pastures newly seeded on cutover or recently cleared land.

Uneven Grazing Harmful.

Mr. Kirby finds that uneven grazing is another of the detriments to good pastures. This results when not enough animals are placed on the grass to keep the sod grazed evenly. When only a few animals are in the pasture, they will graze heavily in some places and allow the other parts to grow unhindered. Those grasses and clovers growing tall and going to seed become hard, fibrous and unpalatable, whereas had they been properly grazed, would have been succulent, tender and palatable. If grazing is uneven, mow the parts not grazed or, better still, add a few more dairy cows to the farm, states Mr. Kirby.

Phosphate Will Balance

Manure Applied to Corn

Farmers who have manure to apply to their corn land will find it to their advantage to mix 25 pounds of 16 per cent acid phosphate with each ton of manure, according to M. F. Miller, of the Missouri College of Agriculture. Every farmer believes in farm manure. Many believe in it so strongly that they will not use other kinds of fertilizers. Barnyard manure will give better returns, however, when mixed with acid phosphate as shown by the results of experiments conducted at the college.

Manure is low in phosphate. Its main value as a fertilizer is in the fact that it contains a high percentage of nitrogen. When phosphate is mixed with it, it makes a better balanced fertilizer.

Another reason for adding phosphate to manure is that it prevents volatilization of the ammonia. Ammonia is valuable in building up soil fertility.

Better Silage Assured

and Expenses Cut Down

Silage will keep just as well without tamping or tramping as with tamping and much better than with poor tamping, according to James W. Linn, extension dairyman at the Kansas State Agricultural college. Let the ensilage fall to the middle of the silo so no loose spots will be formed and the weight will settle the silage down. This practice has proved particularly adaptable to silo filling where two or three men take four or five days. If the silo is filled rapidly, refilling is necessary when tramping is dispensed with. The extension dairyman believes that this method of taking several days to fill a silo assures better silage and it cuts down the expense.

Agricultural Notes

Sorghum as a silage crop is hard to beat.

Soil conservation is of fundamental importance.

Planting legumes is about the only way a farmer can get something for nothing.

Pure-bred cattle, poultry and pigs should be the slogan of all interested in farming.

The man who farms with his head wastes no time shouting "hard times." He doesn't have any.

Sell the crippled, defective and poor-producing cows and give those that remain a little more feed.

Organization may improve the quality of farm products and make payments to the producer on a quality basis.

Look out for clover and alfalfa seed that is dyed red or green. Either it is not hardy in this climate or its hardness is not known.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES

Planked steak with Hawaiian pineapple border is the newest addition to the vogue for planked steaks. It is delightful when prepared in this way: Cut a sirloin steak, weighing about three pounds, one and one-half inches thick. Wipe with a damp cloth. Trim off surplus fat. Broil on each side until almost done. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Heat plank, grease slightly and place the steak on it. Arrange around the edge slices of canned Hawaiian pineapple which have been dipped in flour and fried until a delicate brown, baked tomatoes (stuffed with crushed pineapple) and a border of mashed potatoes put through a pastry bag. Place in a hot oven or under a low flame until potatoes brown slightly. Garnish and serve at once.

British Cabbies Stick

to Trade as Old Men

London.—Taxi drivers of New York are infants compared to their colleagues of London.

Cabbies fifty and sixty years old are the rule rather than the exception here. The other day there was a collision between a taxicab, in which the earl and countess of Wharcliffe were riding, and an omnibus. Testimony showed that the cab-driver was seventy-two years old, and has been driving in London for fifty years. When the motorcar came in he was one of the first to adopt the new mode of transportation.

Car No. 3—15,000 miles 62.709 M. P. H.—less than 14,353 minutes

Sedan

Three Auburn 8-88 Stock Cars Ran Total of:

42,000 miles in less than 14,664 minutes

Daring and unprecedented. Far in excess of any test ever imposed on stock cars. Not done behind pad locks and timed by factory employees, but publicly, under American Automobile Association sanction and supervision.

We decided to go to extremes never before undertaken by any manufacturer in order to completely, conclusively, and overwhelmingly prove Auburn is a faster, more efficient and more durable stock car.

Through blinding fogs; through down pours of rain, under the hottest sun in years; 28 thousand times around the 1½ mile track on slippery boards; never have men and machines endured such abnormal strains!

Nine drivers, working relays days and night, could not over tax the endurance and speed of the Auburn cars. Old records completely smashed from 5 to 5,000 miles for fully equipped stock cars. New records at every revolution of the wheels from 5,000 to 15,000 miles. The speed was phenomenal . . . 34 new stock car records . . .

But What Of It?

We knew all along that Auburn cars are that fast. But, it is not Auburn's proven speed superiority that is most significant . . . frankly, that was easy and incidental. What IS important is the fine character of car necessary for all three cars to survive such speed.

How's This For Proof?

After one of the roadsters had run the unequalled distance of ten thousand gruelling miles, in less than 9,479 minutes at an average speed of over 63 miles per hour, it was taken off the track, thoroughly checked—necessary replacements made—tuned and greased.

Then, for 1,000 miles more, this same car spurred forward at over 72 miles per hour. That proves reserve power, speed and endurance unknown in motor cars until now.

Another Thriller

After 2,637 miles, the Sedan running at about

70 miles an hour speed, turned over on the wet track, during a rainstorm in the middle of the night, slid on its top with all four wheels in the air, for about 50 feet, righted itself and then crashed into the railing. Two doors and three fenders were torn off, radiator and windshield smashed. Seven hours were spent for photographs, radiator and other body repairs and the car went back on the track. It caught up with the other cars, and finished the 15,000 miles at over 62 miles per hour speed. That proves the strong construction, and endurance of Auburn cars, although because in the accident, it lost three fenders and two doors, its entire distance cannot be counted as an official A. A. A. record, but it was officially timed by the A. A. A.

Triple Proof

It would have been perfectly startling if one car had broken all these records, but three Auburn cars were in this test—and all three of them did honor to the name of Auburn.

GEOGRAPHICAL

Location and Area of the Philippine Islands.

In the course of my work as a salesman I met some American friends who are after the truth about the Philippine conditions and things Philippines. To these inquiries after the truth it is always my great privilege and great pleasure to explain things Philippines with an open mind and unbiased point of view. I am sometimes greatly surprised, however, when I meet some who frankly admit that they know nothing about my country except that the Philippines are inhabited with semi-barbaric or uncivilized people. For the benefit of those who know little or nothing about the Philippines I take this opportunity to inform them about my adored native land and people.

To begin with, I invite my American friends to take a trip with me with their map before them and let us locate where the Philippine Archipelago is situated. Some, I know, will look for the Philippines in the Caribbean Sea, but no, let us take the other direction and explore the vast waters of the Pacific Ocean.

When we get to the other side of the seemingly endless blue waters we come to a group of numerous islands, numbering altogether 3,141 islands. These islands are the Philippine Islands which the vast majority of the American people never heard of until the guns of the gallant Admiral Dewey sounded in Manila Bay in 1898.

Now we have come to the Philippine Islands and let us now explore the coasts and see what surrounds them. Let us follow the North Star as our guide and begin our exploration in the north. That island north of us is the Japanese Island of Formosa; those to the west of us are French Indo-China, the British colony of Honkong, and the southern provinces of China; those south of us are the Dutch and British island of Borneo and the Dutch island of Celebes; and to the east of us is the bottomless Pacific Ocean which separates us from where we started our voyage. Let us note in our map that the islands we have just explored lie from 5 degrees north latitude to 22 degrees north latitude, and therefore are entirely in the tropics.

Let us also note the authenticated survey of the 3,141 islands we have seen, beginning from the tiny islet which we saw inhabited only by strange birds, to Luzon island with its millions of human inhabitants. 2,775 of these islands that I pointed out to you, seven-eighths of all, contain less than one square mile each, 262 islands contain between one to ten square miles, 73 islands have from 10 to 100 square miles, 20 islands between 100 to 1,000 square miles, and the rest contain 10,000 square miles each. Luzon, in the north, the biggest of them all, has 46,969 square miles, Mindanas in the far south, the next biggest, has approximately 36,292 square miles. Altogether we have a total land area in the Philippines of 115,000 square miles. This is in excess of the combined areas of the states of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware.

The Philippines have a mildly tropical climate. The nights are cool and sunstrokes are unknown. The average temperature is 80 degrees F. The summer capital in the northern mountains of Luzon—Baguio City—is an exception. Spring season reigns throughout the year in this beautiful city where the government officials spend their time during the hot months. The average temperature is said to be between 60 and 70 degrees F.

This is, my fellow voyagers, our general knowledge of Philippines. In our next trip to these islands, if you are not tired or got seasick of our first voyage, I propose to bring you with me and visit the people. We shall try to learn of their history, so that our vague notions about them shall, I hope, be clarified. I shall endeavor to make you visit the back ground of their origin, their culture, and the slow but sure development of education in the Philippine Islands up to the present time.

by many successful poultrymen. The only change in the all-mash for egg production, according to D. C. Kennard, Station poultryman, is to increase the meat scraps from 5 to 10 per cent and decrease the corn from 70 to 65 per cent. Coarse ground wheat may be used instead of middlings in the mash. And for best results, Mr. Kennard would also use milk in some form.

Success with all-mash feeding the laying pullets, especially for winter eggs, is largely determined by the kind of mixture and manner of feeding it. The mash should be as granular as possible rather than finely ground. A suitable type of feeder should provide 20 to 24 feet of eating space per hundred pullets. Fresh mash should be fed daily in the evening, the amount being about what will be consumed during the next twenty-four hours.

Electric lights may be used to advantage. A warm moist mash fed in the evening, especially in cold weather, may prove beneficial.

Details relative to the all-mash method of feeding layers may be had by writing the Ohio Experiment Station at Wooster.

BEWARE OF THE DEADLY DOTTED LINE

By W. R. MOREHOUSE
Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association

WITHDRAWING the family's savings account at the bank where it is safe, and losing it through speculation is a serious matter. It may bring great hardship, especially to the mistress of the home. It may force great economies in household management or amount to actual privation. It may mean that the children will have to go to work before they complete their education. The loss of the family's accumulations may even result in physical breakdown on the part of the wife through worry over the loss of savings which she helped to accumulate at the sacrifice of home comforts, but was not consulted when it came to investing them. The making of investments by men who are heads of families and inexperienced in finance should not be undertaken without consulting her. But even if both agree the venture should be talked over with the local banker or information about it obtained from the National Better Business Bureau in New York, which serves without cost and purely in the public interest. If this is done a lot of trouble and quite likely many regrets and heartaches will be avoided.

There is one point in the investor where he should have above all a red-light stop signal to cause him to pause and investigate and that is just before he reaches the decision to "sign on the dotted line." Before you part with your savings in the bank by signing a contract placed before you by sharp promoters, stop, examine and investigate! It will pay to read the contract several times, even reading it aloud, all the while weighing every term. It will pay to be on guard against the deadly fine print usually incorporated in most contracts,—so small that it strains your eyes and causes you to skim over it superficially. Do not sign blindfolded. It will pay well to take plenty of time to study the contract by yourself where all is quiet and you are free from the personal influence of the persuasive promoter, for to sign without the calmest consideration may spell your Waterloo financially.

Unless dealing with a responsible firm or individual, never sign on the dotted line. If in the least doubt, don't sign. Never sign on verbal assurances that you are fully protected. Terms stated orally but not incorporated in a contract are not binding. Glowing promises, wild exaggerations and gross misstatements of facts are seldom reduced to writing or made in the presence of your witnesses. Your failure to read and to understand a contract before signing is not a legal excuse. When you sign a contract you proclaim that you agree with its terms and will abide by and endeavor to carry them out.

Don't sign just because some high-pressure salesman tells you that you are a wonder, or that you show good judgment, or that you have a lot of sense. Sign only when you are fully convinced that your interests are fully protected.

Prominent Men Used as Scenery

A number of slick promoters recently organized in a certain city an "automobile club" with the assurance

THE FARMER'S BEST WAY OUT

Dean Russell of Wisconsin College of Agriculture says: "Two things have hit the farmer hard but the same things have hit business. They are increase in cost of production and decline in prices which latter has been more drastic in farm products than manufactured products. The farmer's political friends say salvation can be found through legislation. Our legislative doctors propose price control. The difficulty with this is price control always means price elevation which always produces expansion in production and if this occurs without expansion in consumption you have inevitable decline in prices. The remedy works to produce the very opposite result from that intended.

"Another legislative panacea would make it easier to borrow, as if running into debt was the solution of the difficulty. There are farmers who wish it had not been quite so easy to borrow because the inevitable day comes when they have to pay principal and interest. The third legislative remedy would make easier the pathway for cooperative endeavor. All you have to do is to wave the magic wand 'Cooperation' and all the farmer's difficulties will immediately disappear. I wonder if there is any government that can make people cooperate. The success of cooperative effort will lie in organization from the bottom up rather than from the top down and it will take a decade or two for the results to be felt.

"The farmers have at hand a remedy that can be utilized immediately with the definite knowledge that it will secure far better results. If they will take a leaf out of present day business methods they will have relief in agriculture they will not have to wait for. Business has suffered activities of the inexperienced that it would soon erect a number of downtown garages where busy business men could park their cars. As an inducement for business men to take out memberships, charges to them for storage were to be nominal, much less than a like service could be obtained elsewhere. A Board of

Governors was organized with the names of prominent local citizens, among them two eminent judges. No sooner was the organization of the board complete than the promoters, armed with the endorsement of these outstanding men, went forth to reap a great harvest by selling memberships. They got the members—but the building of the garages remained an idle dream.

When the members of the Board of Governors were later interviewed as to how they came to consent to the use of their names they stated that they thought the additional storage facilities were needed in the downtown district and they signed up without looking into the proposition carefully. Imagine their chagrin when told that a reading of the by-laws of the organization showed that the Board of Governors had no powers but had been used merely as scenery in order to sell memberships in a fake proposition!

Because these prominent citizens were careless with their names and failed to read and to investigate the enterprise, hundreds of business men bought memberships only to lose their money. Signing without reading is about the most dangerous act of financial carelessness that can be committed.

the same as the farmer, yet business came through in a way that is far ahead of the farmer. This has been brought about through industrial efficiency, through improvement of methods. They have increased labor output per unit to the degree the cost of production have actually been reduced by better methods of carrying on work. Industrial enterprises on a large scale are spending millions on research. In ten years automobile output per worker has increased 172 per cent, tires 211 per cent, oil 85 per cent, cement 61 per cent.

"Compare that with others. The packers have increased only 27 per cent, sugar refining 23 per cent, boots and shoes only 6 per cent. There has been an increase in agriculture since 1913 of 20 per cent. It is doubtful that business has any such opportunity as exists in agriculture to reduce cost of production through improved methods. Take corn.—Iowa shows a variation in cost of production from fifteen cents to seventy-five cents a bushel. In Illinois the cost of producing corn on 80 acre fields was reduced from fifty-two cents to twenty cents a bushel. The manufacturer who had it within his power to reduce production costs from fifty-two to thirty cents per unit would be tickled to death with the opportunity of meeting competition under these conditions.

"The way out for the farmer is (1) to become a business man, (2) to adopt business methods, to adapt himself to the same kind of conditions and be as efficiently mobile as is our manufacturer or our business man in the ordinary channels of his trade. (3) to rely less upon political promises and more upon individual initiative, (4) to work toward cooperative endeavor but in the mean time not to wait for cooperative endeavor to solve all of these problems because individually he can do something at the present time."

We've just been over talking to Dr. Thinkle to see if there anybody sick that we ought to show sympathy by mentioning them in these items. But he says that everybody is going strong as far as he knows, and seems like even his dependable customers have found so many other things to occupy their minds here lately that their health has improved a good deal.

Simon Sloan drove down on Blue river last Friday thinking he might accept a job on a bridge they're building over there. But when he saw how heavy the work is, he only stayed long enough to pump up a tire and start back.

Sam Solomon's family put in a long hard day at a Street fair over in Albany last Thursday. They didn't get home until away in the night and that together with what they had consumed thru the day left them feeling mighty touchy the next morning. And they all tried to keep out of one another's sight as much as they could in order to stay peaceable.

Mrs. Ed Thomas, who was to preside at this week's meeting of the Woman's Discussion Club, didn't get to attend on account of she had company. And she was disappointed some when she called a few of the members later to ask had they been able to hold the meeting, and they said it was the best session they'd had for a good while.

Miss Henrietta Nichols, who works in the law office of Attorney Parks, has been complaining that he had so much for her to do last week that it interrupted her a lot with the book she was reading.

Jason Crabb stopped Andy Dobbins yesterday afternoon to ask did he think a president ought to hold more than two terms of office. But Andy wouldn't say yes or no on account of he was in a hurry to get home to his supper and he didn't want to leave any unfinished argument.

Our neighboring town of Bromwell has been trying to make some witty remarks about us again, and the latest thing they've been saying is that the corn fields are crowding in on Folksburg and causing us to lose ground every year. But we can over look their comment, for even if they do have the county seat, they have to depend on us for something interesting to talk about.

Something knocked a fine flower pot off of Sidney Moon's porch yesterday and broke it. And Sidney has expressed such profound ignorance of what could have done it, that Mrs. Moon feels pretty certain it was him.

Mrs. Amanda Bell was telling some of the neighbors recently how her daughter Daisy's tastes have become more expensive all the time. She said used to Daisy was perfectly satisfied with a trip to Nashville or Albany once in a while, but now she has to go to the city for a week or two before she feels like she has been anywhere.

Somebody was talking the other day how hard it is to get a place on the bench in front of the Grand hotel any more. Seems like you can't even do it now by calling one of the occupants to a telephone and beating them back to the bench, for the reason that they've all become suspicious and won't answer a phone.

Joe Dadds and his wife drove over toward Polk county last Saturday to see if they could find some blackberries. Which they did, and they picked nearly four gallons in one place. They felt mighty good about it until the owner of the land came along and they had to give him all they had picked to settle for trespassing.

Adam Bird, our bachelor, tried to pass a Canadian quarter at the drug store yesterday. But he looked so guilty while he was trying to act natural and unconcerned, that they noticed the quarter and wouldn't take it.

Fish Caught With Seed

Natives of Dahomey are catching fish by "doping" the swimmers with a certain seed. They scatter the seed over the river, the fish eat it, become stupefied and rise to the surface helpless. Then the natives spear their prey. Fish weighing as much as 20 pounds are obtained.

Emergency
Jim
By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

JIM went down to the station to see the two girls off—his sister Constance and her chum Madge—on their adventurous expedition to the big city, armed with two exquisitely engraved diplomas of the local business college and unlimited expectations.
Jim was gloomy and took no pains to conceal the fact. Dutifully he kissed his sister, then seized Madge's little gloved hand. "Remember," he said hoarsely, "when the Fifth avenue high hats are chasing you, I'm still thinking about you back here holding down my little old job in Perkins' hardware store. If you want me in an emergency—well, I'll be waiting."
This was merely an attempt to convey to her as well as a man could in the presence of his sister that he was hers to the death.
And now they had been here six months, rooming together in a tiny apartment opening on an airshaft where air was air without anything particularly fresh about it and sunshine was to be had only by going out after it.
Through employment agencies, each had landed a small position and—a fact which seemed more important to each than the job—both had acquired an esquire of sorts.
This had come about through a former acquaintance of Constance's in the business college, one George Perkins who, hearing from the folks back home that Constance was in New York, had got her address through them and hunted her up.
The second time he came he brought with him a friend, a smartly dressed, personable boy who looked, Constance said afterward, just like his name which was Mortimer Peyster. Madge was smitten at once and by the third meeting was convinced not only that she was in love with him but that properly encouraged, he would return her sentiments.
But first there was that little matter of "proper encouragement," for as the days passed, the young man in question, although friendly and always willing to make a fourth at their good times, failed to hint at any desire for an engagement, much less a wedding.
Yet it was Mortimer himself who let fall the word which might have proved Madge's undoing.
"I sure miss good home cooking," he remarked one night. "These sandwiches are the berries."
The next time he came Madge had made not only more sandwiches but a chocolate cake, one of those luscious, three decker affairs with a generous topping of frosting. Mortimer sampled it freely while Madge watched him gleefully.
When he had gone, she made a brave proposal to Constance. "Let's invite the boys to Sunday dinner," she suggested eagerly. "I'm willing to do every bit of the cooking."
Constance was doubtful. "On a two burner gas plate?"
"On one, if necessary!" retorted Madge. "Plank steak and all the fixings!"
So it was settled and the two young men were duly invited over the telephone.
Now it is no small matter to get up a large-sized meal in a small-sized apartment out of a very slender food budget. In fact, it was only by considerable planning, scrimping and self denial that the thing was managed at all and, by the time the Sunday selected for the affair had arrived, Madge was beginning to wonder if even winning the handsome Mortimer was worth the effort expended.
The meal, as a meal, was a tremendous success from start to finish. The steak was done to a turn and not a shade beyond; the vegetables were tender and decoratively fluted; the dessert, made earlier in the day, was coldly delicious. If Mortimer was less lively than usual, Madge was too concerned with her serving to notice.
Her moment was to come when, replete with the good things she had given him, Mortimer should expand and perhaps suggest that she cook for him the rest of his days. For Madge imagined that that was what she desired above all else.
Came the moment. Constance, insisting that Madge had done her share of labor, was sociably doing the dishes in the kitchen with George. Madge and Mort had the tiny sitting-room to themselves.
"I've got something to tell you," said Mortimer suddenly.
"Yes?" encouraged Madge, her heart skipping a beat or two.
"I'm going back home to my father's office," he said. "All this"—he signified his surroundings with a wave of his hand—"and your dandy meals and all have made me—well, sort of hanker for a place of my own. There's a little girl upstate there I used to know that you remind me of. I'm going back to her and I wanted you to be the first to know."
Two days later, Jim Brenton entered Perkins' hardware store with an expansive grin on his face. In his pocket was a night letter from the girl he had loved since kindergarten days and it said the words he most wanted to hear.
Dear Jim:
"There was a man I thought I wanted to propose but when he didn't I was glad after all and it must have been because I love you, only it took an emergency or something to show me, and do you still feel the same?"
"MADGE."

INTERESTING DECISION
Of Judge Clarence Curtain of Pickaway Common Pleas.

A decision of exceptional interest to business men and attorneys throughout the county was handed down by Judge Clarence Curtain of Pickaway Common Pleas Court in the case of Harry Brown vs. Charles Ankrom, et al.
The action was brought by Brown in the Justice of Peace court of Squire Geo. Strawser of Circleville township. An affidavit for attachment with summons was issued and property of defendants found at their home in Muhlenberg township was attached.
On motion of defendants to discharge the attachment for reason that Justices of the Peace have no jurisdiction outside of the township for which they are elected the case was taken to the Court of Common Pleas for decision on the motion.
Judge Curtain in a lengthy opinion decided that Justice Courts in this county have jurisdiction to issue summons with affidavits of attachment co-extensive within the boundaries of the county, and the motion of defendants was overruled.
Paul E. Adkins was attorney for plaintiff and C. A. Leist was attorney for defendants.

Typhoid Germ Lives Years, Science Learns

San Francisco. — Disease-causing bacteria have many devices to perpetuate their kind in an adverse world. Bacteriologists of the Hooper foundation for medical research, University of California, have shown that tetanus spores may resist the temperature of boiling water for 90 minutes, botulism in vegetable juices for 5½ hours and those of a closely related but harmless species for 8½ hours. Other workers have proved that typhoid and other organisms may remain alive for years at refrigerator or lower temperatures.

This happy provision of nature—happy, that is, for the bacteria—constitutes a factor of great danger for man and animals which it is the function of scientific research to obviate, says Dr. George E. Coleman of the Hooper foundation. "The brilliant success," he states, "that has been attained already, in which the experimental use of mice and guinea pigs has played a large part, is constantly being proclaimed by statistical evidence of fewer food poisonings and typhoid fever outbreaks, as well as by increased protection from many of our other microscopic foes."

Robin Answered the Ad

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

ROBIN STRAKER, known to all his many friends as Bin because he seemed always to have been everywhere, sat down for his breakfast of fragrant sausage and fried tomatoes which he had prepared himself. Bin liked getting his own breakfast.

Anyway Bin always spread down a fresh newspaper on his small table instead of a tea cloth—not necessarily to save laundry but simply because it was less trouble and always clean. He invariably opened it to a page where there were no pictures—usually the page on which the property advertisements arrayed themselves.

As a matter of fact, Bin had acquired this one habit while, during the war and far out in No Man's land, he might have had a moment during meal time to read the home papers and spread them out while consuming bully beef or other dainties of the soldier's life.

His breakfast now was a better affair altogether than those of war days, and while Bin enjoyed his sausage he idly scanned the columns of finely printed personals that happened to be just alongside his excellent cup of coffee.

"By Jove! That's funny," and Bin read again the personal that had called forth his ejaculation.

"Robin Straker: Information wanted. Please communicate. 093 John street. Frances."

Robin Straker knew, of course, that he was not the Straker mentioned in the advertisement, but he decided to look up the address at noon and see what was in the wind.

He finished his breakfast and dashed off to business. At noon he presented himself to the address given and sent in his card. The office was apparently that of a woman decorator as it breathed forth all sorts of alluring emblems of the feminine mind.

A young lady entered and Robin Straker caught his breath. He was instantly glad that he had the habit of spreading a newspaper down in place of a tea cloth—otherwise he might have missed one of the sweetest moments in life—that sudden, glorious moment when the One Girl arrives.

The young lady was, however, not struck in the same way. Her manner was icy.

"So you are Robin Straker, are you?" the fair one asked frigidly.

"I am," said Robin, "but not—"

"And why have you chosen to hide all these years—instead of facing things like a man. Frances has been searching for you for ten years—it's been a cowardly, hateful way to treat a girl—marry her and then desert her."

"I say—hold on," put in Straker finally getting a word in, "you're making a mistake. I'm not the Robin Straker you're so flattering to—"

"Then what are you here for?" she demanded.

"I say—you little spitfire—if you happened to see your own name in the paper and had some information that might help those seeking your namesake would you or would you not answer the appeal?"

"Well—if you're not the Robin Straker we're looking for why didn't you say so in the beginning?"

"I didn't get a look in," said Bin and grinned. "You had such a pile of flattering remarks to hurl at me that I couldn't get a word in edge-ways."

"I'm very sorry," she said, "and now that I've talked so much—you can start in."

"As a matter of fact," said Robin, "I saw the passing of the man you are looking for—he gasped out his real name to me just in the nick of time—with his last breath. There was a bit of a brawl—in Mexico—in 1920. I think it was, and he—Bob Straker—shot himself—he was—"

"But Bin thought better than to say just what the man was."

"You might just as well say it," said Polly. "He married my cousin, deserted her after a few months and never even had the decency to let her know whether he was dead or alive. She wants now to marry again and I was making an effort to ascertain for absolute certainty that she is free. I had never seen this Robin Straker and, naturally, didn't know—"

"You need not apologize any more," said Bin, "but don't you think considering you said such frightful things to me—the very moment I appeared in sight, that you'd better atone by making my lunch hour less lonely? Besides," he hastened to add as he saw a natural hesitation in Polly's desire to atone in just that way, "there is much I must tell you if your cousin is to be certain that she is free. Remember—no one but myself, perhaps, was witness to the actual passing of one Robin Straker." He looked hard at Polly and added with a half grin, "You see I can almost bar this marriage of your cousin—if I'm not treated right."

Polly laughed, and Bin fell to wondering if she would sometimes laugh at way when they were having breakfast on a newspaper—and—how somehow felt that she would.

AMUSEMENTS

More than forty acres of ground were occupied by the reproduction of a Canadian frontier village and fort used in filming of "The Flaming Forest" the Cosmopolitan production filmed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer under the direction of Reginald Barker, one of the most famous directors of western epics.

The picture, featuring Antonio Moreno and Renee Adoree, supported by a cast of more than twenty celebrated players, is now being shown at the Met theater.

The village, which was under construction for more than a month before a camera was cranked, was the largest motion picture set of its kind ever constructed and was a faithful reproduction of a frontier town and stockade of the early seventies before Canada ever made any real attempt to govern the three hundred thousand square miles known as the Northwest territory.

It was at first planned to film the entire production on the Canadian locales described in the famous book by James Oliver Curwood, but this was given up when it was learned that the original locales have been "marred" for picture purposes by the encroachment of civilization.

The set was then built in the mountains of California on a spot which in every way fitted Curwood's description. Following the filming of the village scenes the company of more than five hundred players were taken to Montana and to several additional locations in the California Sierras.

Among the supporting cast of players are Gardner James, borrowed from the Lasky studio; Oscar Beregi borrowed from Universal and Bert Roach and Tom O'Brien, two of M-G-M's featured players.

"Gob" of Uncertain Origin

The derivation of the word "gob," applied to sailors, is uncertain. Some authorities say that it comes from the Chinese; others, that the word was adopted from England. "Gob" in provincial English means a "coast guardsman," probably from the fact that the seamen were accustomed to chew tobacco, since "gob" in English also means a "little lump or piece, or a mouthful."

The Fine Gold of It

There is an honor in business that is the fine gold of it; that reckons with every man justly; that loves right; that regards kindness, and fairness more highly than goods or prices or profits. It becomes a man more than his furnishings or his house. It speaks for him in the heart of everyone. His friendships are serene and secure.—Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

GEOGRAPHICAL

Location and Area of the Philippine Islands.

In the course of my work as a salesman I met some American friends who are after the truth about the Philippine conditions and things Philippines. To these inquiries after the truth it is always my great privilege and great pleasure to explain things Philippines with an open mind and unbiased point of view. I am sometimes greatly surprised, however, when I meet some who frankly admit that they know nothing about my country except that the Philippines are inhabited with semi-barbaric or uncivilized people. For the benefit of those who know little or nothing about the Philippines I take this opportunity to inform them about my adored native land and people.

To begin with, I invite my American friends to take a trip with me with their map before them and let us locate where the Philippine Archipelago is situated. Some, I know, will look for the Philippines in the Caribbean Sea, but no, let us take the other direction and explore the vast waters of the Pacific Ocean.

When we get to the other side of the seemingly endless blue waters we come to a group of numerous islands, numbering altogether 3,141 islands. These islands are the Philippine Islands which the vast majority of the American people never heard of until the guns of the gallant Admiral Dewey sounded in Manila Bay in 1898.

Now we have come to the Philippine Islands and let us now explore the coasts and see what surrounds them. Let us follow the North Star as our guide and begin our exploration in the north. That island north of us is the Japanese Island of Formosa; those to the west of us are French Indo-China, the British colony of Hongkong, and the southern provinces of China; those south of us are the Dutch and British island of Borneo and the Dutch island of Celebes; and to the east of us is the bottomless Pacific Ocean which separates us from where we started our voyage. Let us note in our map that the islands we have just explored lie from 5 degrees north latitude to 22 degrees north latitude, and therefore are entirely in the tropics.

Let us also note the authenticated survey of the 3,141 islands we have seen, beginning from the tiny islet which we saw inhabited only by strange birds, to Luzon island with its millions of human inhabitants. 2,775 of these islands that I pointed out to you, seven-eighths of all, contain less than one square mile each, 262 islands contain between one to ten square miles, 73 islands have from 10 to 100 square miles, 20 islands between 100 to 1,000 square miles, and the rest contain 10,000 square miles each. Luzon, in the north, the biggest of them all, has 46,969 square miles, Mindanas in the far south, the next biggest, has approximately 36,292 square miles. Altogether we have a total land area in the Philippines of 115,000 square miles. This is in excess of the combined areas of the states of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware.

The Philippines have a mildly tropical climate. The nights are cool and sunstrokes are unknown. The average temperature is 80 degrees F. The summer capital in the northern mountains of Luzon—Baguio City—is an exception. Spring season reigns throughout the year in this beautiful city where the government officials spend their time during the hot months. The average temperature is said to be between 60 and 70 degrees F.

This is, my fellow voyagers, our general knowledge of Philippines. In our next trip to these islands, if you are not tired or got seasick of our first voyage, I propose to bring you with me and visit the people. We shall try to learn of their history, so that our vague notions about them shall, I hope, be clarified. I shall endeavor to make you visit the back ground of their origin, their culture, and the slow but sure development of education in the Philippine Islands up to the present time.

ALL-MASH

Feeding For Fall and Winter Egg Production.

Poultry keepers who have used the all-mash method of feeding chicks and growing pullets may continue the method for laying pullets.

The method has proved satisfactory for fall and winter egg production at the Ohio Experiment Station and is being used by many successful poultrymen. The only change in the all-mash for egg production, according to D. C. Kennard, Station poultryman, is to increase the meat scraps from 5 to 10 per cent and decrease the corn from 70 to 65 per cent. Coarse ground wheat may be used instead of middlings in the mash. And for best results, Mr. Kennard would also use milk in some form.

Success with all-mash feeding the laying pullets, especially for winter eggs, is largely determined by the kind of mixture and manner of feeding it. The mash should be as granular as possible rather than finely ground. A suitable type of feeder should provide 20 to 24 feet of eating space per hundred pullets. Fresh mash should be fed daily in the evening, the amount being about what will be consumed during the next twenty-four hours.

Electric lights may be used to advantage. A warm moist mash fed in the evening, especially in cold weather, may prove beneficial.

Details relative to the all-mash method of feeding layers may be had by writing the Ohio Experiment Station at Wooster.

"Best For The Least"

Yes... in all four corners of the earth!

THE FOLLOWING IS QUOTED, BY PERMISSION, FROM A LETTER OF MR. A. J. BARKER, ST. LOUIS, DATED MAY 10th, 1927

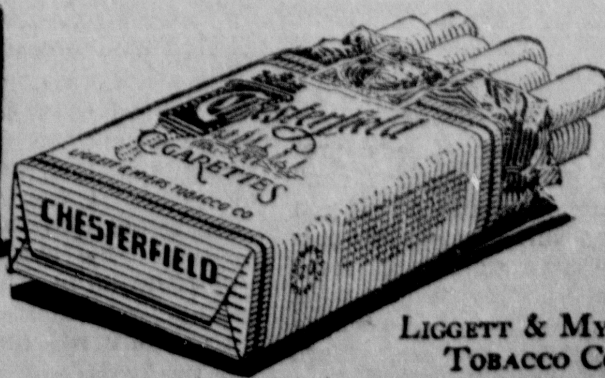

"It will be, I have no doubt, a source of gratification to you to know that Chesterfield cigarettes were on sale and, at that, the leading American seller, in all parts of the world.

"We started our trip on December 2nd, and visited among other points—Madeira Island... Gibraltar... Monte Carlo... Algiers... Haifa... Jerusalem... Cairo

...Naples... Suez... Bombay... Java... Dutch Sumatra... Singapore... Manila... Hongkong... Shanghai... Peking... Kobe... Tokyo... Honolulu... the Canal Zone... Havana and home.

"Not only was Chesterfield the leading American cigarette at all points visited, but it was the best seller (all brands) on our ship, the Empress of Scotland."
